42. Further Description of Important Features This is a square limestone tower with buttresses at each corner. It was originally the entrance and the bellfry of the building built in 1889, and had a tall, wooden, steeple roof. The older part of the church was not being used and was torn down in 1980 and the tower was closed in on the east and south sides to become a free-standing monument. It had arched openings that are filled in with squared rock on the south and east sides and there is
43 History and Significance The First Presbyterian Church of Kirkwood was established in 1854. It was the second protestant church in Kirkwood (the first was the Olive Chapel of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in 1853). Two ministers, E.T. Baird and Joseph Fenton, and an elder, Jonas Geyer, helped to found the church of seven members. The church met in the home of Henry Singleton on the southeast corner of Dickson and Adams and later in a log school
44 Description of Environment and Outbuildings The large main church building is about forty feet to the east of the tower. The lot surrounding the tower is being planted with dogwood and pine trees and grass to make a park. A sidewalk surrounds the tower in a circle and radiates out to the four corners of the lot. An 18 inch high concrete wall surrounds the tower in a near the present Pitman School. The first elders were, Robert Yeats, Henry Singleton and Reuben Beman, and Dr. William Sale was the Deacon.

In 1856 the church acquired the present property and erected a small brick church.

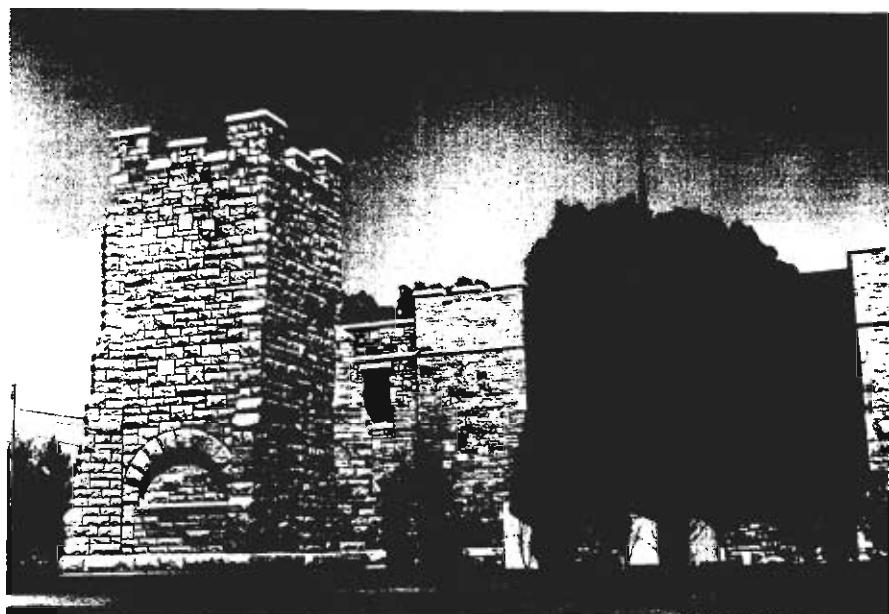

The church was without a pastor until 1867, when the Reverend John Warner was called. He served until his death in 1894. His granddaughter is the poet Marianne Moore.

By 1887 the church had outgrown its brick building and had it torn down and a larger, stone, Richardson Romanesque building was completed in 1889 by John G. Cairns. Mr. Cairns' wife, Anna Sneed Cairns, ran the Kirkwood Seminary which he had also designed.

The newer, larger, modern part of the church was built in 1956, while Rev. Donald Stewart was pastor. The sanctuary was designed by Robert Fischer and Wilbur Campbell and was influenced by German and Swedish church architecture.

This is a large home. Its prominent features include: its asymmetrical plan; its vertical facade symmetry; its dominant facade gable with its decorative trusses at the apex and molded wood frieze; its overhanging roofline cornice with exposed rafter ends and decorative wood brackets; and its open-frame wrap-around facade veranda which completely wraps the east wing. The veranda's projecting roof rests on wood ionic columns which extend to wood piers. It has a heavy wood balustrade and wood floor and stairs. Iron stair railings are in place. The facade entry is central and projects slightly within the porch recession. It contains a single-leaf wood door with raised paneling and a single pane of glass in its upper half. It is covered by an aluminum storm door and topped by a two-light transom. The facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, two over two lights, with wood surrounds, heavy wood entablatures, bracketed wood lugsills and wood shutters. The facade gable window is a wood casement window with wood shutters. There is a one story frame addition at the rear of this building with board and batten siding, and attached to the rear of that, is a wood storage shed.

43. HISTORIC SIGNIFICANCE

125 E. Adams

This house was probably built by E. W. Halsey, a building contractor. He also built the first public school in Kirkwood in 1869, the Gill house at 419 E. Argonne, and a small cottage at 126 E. Washington. An 1878 map of Kirkwood shows three buildings on the Halsey property - one large building fronting on E. Adams and two small buildings fronting on E. Washington. The architectural embellishments of this building coordinate with that of 126 E. Washington, although this is a much more pretentious dwelling.

This is a modest sized dwelling. The prominent features of this building include: its low hipped roof with its gabled facade and south elevation dormers; its overhanging eaves with ornate wood brackets and a simple wood two-course frieze beneath; and its basic box-like appearance embellished by its projecting one story sunroom on the west elevation and its open-frame wrap-around facade veranda. The veranda's projecting roof is supported by slightly elephantine shingled wood posts which extend to a solid wood balustrade. The area between the posts is spanned by flattened arches. The veranda floor and stairs are poured concrete. The entry is off-center toward the north and contains a single-leaf wood door with multi-lights covered by a wood storm door. It is topped by a half-circle transom with leaded lights. The facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, six over one lights, with molded wood surrounds and wood lugsills. The double set on the first level have wood mullions. The second level windows have wood shutters. The facade dormer contains a wood casement window whose top echoes the above gable. A secondary entry, visible from the street, is recessed on the north elevation. It contains a single-leaf wood door with multi-lights covered by a wood screen door. There is a one story frame addition at the rear of this building.

The prominent features of this building include: its sweeping bellcast gable which includes a screened-in facade porch within its confines; its overhanging eaves; its facade dormer which is gabled with returns; its wide shed dormer on its rear elevation; its oriel on its west elevation; and its stain-glass windows. The facade dormer has flared walls, an eyebrow ventilation opening within its gable and a triple wood window unit. These are two-leaf casement windows each containing eight lights. The unit has wood mullions, and is topped by a plain wood frieze that spans the dormer beneath the gable. The facade porch has sets of triple wood screens separated by stylized wood posts. The porch floor and stairs are wood. The entry is off-center toward the east and contains a single-leaf wood door with multi-lights. It is topped by a transom. The first level facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, three over one, with wood sills, surrounds and entablatures. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice. There is a one story frame addition at the rear of this building with a hipped roof.

This building complex is primarily read as a rectangular block with a front-facing pedimented gable, a large 2 + story projecting wing on the north elevation, and a projecting wing on the south elevation (which is an earlier church building). The wing that is the earlier church building includes classrooms and offices which are at the rear of the newer church and on the east end of the north elevations projecting wing. All of these wings/additions/church buildings interconnect. The newer church faces N. Woodlawn (east). It was built in 1959. Its primary elevation is dominated by its tall wood-frame steeple tower, its pedimented gable and its two story pedimented portico. The pediment of the portico features a circular window with wood muntins. The portico has large Corinthian wood columns, a concrete slab and concrete stairs. There are three entries on this elevation. The central entry contains a double-leaf wood panel door small octagonal leaded-glass windows in the top one-half. This door has molded wood surrounds and is topped by a wide entablature and broken pediment. To either side of this entry are single-leaf wood panel doors with small octagonal leaded-glass windows in their top one-halves. There are three windows on this elevation. They are double-hung wood sash with six over six light configurations and stone sills. This elevation also features brick quoins and a plain wood roofline frieze. The side elevations of this building feature arched window units. These units include double-hung wood sash with nine over nine light configurations topped by fanlights. These windows also have stone sills, radiating header bricks along the arch with keystones. This elevation also has small rectangular windows which are double-hung wood sash with six over six light configurations and stone sills. There is an entrance on this elevation which is on a projection located at the intersection of this building with the earlier church. The entrance contains a single-leaf wood panel Colonial-style door which is flanked by sidelights, which in turn, are flanked by fluted wood pilasters. It is topped by a wood transom which has been divided into five lights. This entry is accessed by a concrete stoop and stairs with wrought iron railings. The north elevation wing houses offices and classrooms. It has double-hung wood sash windows with six over six light configurations and stone sills, matching the small rectangular windows on the side elevations of the newer church. It also features metal and glass hinged windows with stone sills (primarily on the E. Adams elevation). There is a primary entry on the E. Adams elevation of this wing. It contains double-leaf wood panel doors with small octagonal leaded-glass windows in the upper one-halves. It is flanked by fluted wood pilasters and topped by a five-light transom which is topped by a wide wood entablature featuring triglyphs and metopes. This wing is joined with an older wing on its west end. The wing projecting from the south elevation of the main church was the earlier church, built in 1949. Its primary elevation faces E. Jefferson. It features a projecting one story bay which contains the primary entrance. This entry is recessed and contains double-leaf wood-plank doors with small diamond-shape lights in the upper one-third. This entry is off-set by raised stone panels and a flat metal hood. A smooth dressed stone ledge tops a parapet, and a smooth stone stringcourse spans this elevation at the bottom of the parapet/top of the entry. Above the entry projection are three arched recessions which contain metal and glass windows which match the hinged windows on the classroom wing on the north elevation. These windows feature large extended stone lintels topped by vertical point brickcourses. There is an additional course of vertical point bricks within these arches, and these arches are off-set by radiating header bricks. The roofline projects slightly and features a smooth dressed stone cornice and stone modillions. The side elevations feature a continuation of the stone cornice and stone modillions, attached brick buttresses and the same window-types as the primary elevation.

The prominent features of this building include: its two story box-like shape which is topped by a medium hipped roof; its window bay on the east elevation; its 1 1/2 story bracketed oriel on the west elevation; its triangular dormer on the east elevation; its pedimented dormers on the facade and west elevations; its stain-glass windows; and its open-frame wrap-around facade veranda. The veranda has a low hipped roof supported by wood doric columns. It has a plain wood balustrade and wood floor and stairs. The entry is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf wood door with a large pane of glass. It is covered by a wood screen door, and it is within wood framework that also contains one stain-glass side light (toward the west). A wood entablature spans the top of this framework. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood lugsills and surrounds. The first level facade window is topped by a wood entablature, and the second level facade windows are topped by a plain wood frieze which is beneath the roofline cornice. A decorative diamond-shaped panel is in place between the second level facade windows. The facade dormer windows are multi-paned wood casement windows, flat-topped, with wood molding and sills. This is a triple window set with wood mullions. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice with a plain wood frieze beneath.

42 Further Description of Important Features This Gothic Revival house had its original, ornate brick chimneys and vertical board and batten siding covered with stucco in the 1920's. Its original form has been little changed other than that, retaining its ornamental iron work and scalloped wood trim on the porch. It has a cross gable roof with one gable dormer on the front, two gabledormers on the east side, and 2 gable dormers on the back. There is a one-story bay window			5 Other Name(s) 217 E. Adams
43 History and Significance Henry Hough had this house built in 1859. Hough was an early Kirkwood civic leader and this was the second of three houses that he occupied in the area. The building, furnishings and a "house warming party" are described in a diary still in a daughter's possession, which has been reproduced in full in the Kirkwood Historical Society Review. One of the elementary schools in Kirkwood is named for him.
44 Description of Environment and Outbuildings The house sits in the middle of a wooded lot. There is a one car, stucco garage with a gable roof in the northwest corner of the lot.

on the west-side of the front of the house, and the front door is on the east side of the front of the house. A small, square, one-story front porch with a hip roof shelters the front door and goes around the east side of the house for a short distance. The porch roof is supported by three plain, square, stucco posts. There is a wrought iron railing over the bay window and another forms a balcony in front of a second story window on the east side. There is a two-story sun room addition with a shed roof filling in the angle on the west side of the back. The east side of the back has the gable facing out and has a small, one-story room with a shed roof added on.

This is a large home. Its prominent features include: a steeply pitched roof of irregular shape; a dominant front-facing gable with bargeboard that flares out; an asymmetrical plan; a bay window on the east elevation; a bracketed facade oriel; and a facade entry veranda. The veranda has a curvilinear roof supported by wood columns which extend to a brick patio. Brick stairs and stoop access a recessed entry which contains a single-leaf wood door with a single pane of glass in the upper half. It is covered by a wood storm door. The entry is topped by a transom which has been filled with a wood panel. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood sills, surrounds and lintels. The facade's oriel window has a hipped roof with a plain wood frieze beneath its cornice. There is a louvered ventilation opening in the facade gable. There is a one story frame addition at the rear of this building with a concrete foundation and a shed roof. The home also features a screened-in porch at the rear.

The facade of this building is dominated by an enclosed projecting entrance portico which is gabled with returns. The gable is filled in with a rounded arch. The entrance has wood posts with stylized capitals. The entry contains a single-leaf multi-paned wood door covered by an aluminum screen door. A concrete stoop and stairs with wrought iron railings access this entry. The facade windows are wood with wood sash. The windows to the far east end of the facade are double. They are double-hung, flat-topped, four over one, with wood sills, surrounds and mullion. The windows flanking the entry are double-hung, flat-topped, ten over one, with wood lugsills and surrounds. There are two small casement windows above the entry which contain six lights. A decorative wood planter box is in place beneath those windows. The first floor windows have wood lintels. The second floor windows are topped by a continuous plain wood frieze. There is a two story porch on the rear of the structure. The porch has been enclosed at the second level. The roofline features overhanging eaves. This building is almost identical to 212 E. Washington.

This building is dominated by its low, wide gabled roof and projecting facade bay which contains a screened-in porch and a sunroom. It features deeply overhanging eaves and exposed rafter ends. The gable has projecting verges with plain bargeboards. The facade porch/sunroom projection has a low hipped roof. The sunroom on the east end contains wood multi-paned casement windows which are covered by aluminum storm windows. The screened-in porch contains some wood screens and some aluminum screens. Its door and sidelight are aluminum. The facade entry has a single-leaf wood door with eight small lights at the top. It is covered by an aluminum storm door. To the west of the facade entry is a wood sash window which is double-hung, flat-topped, ten over one, with plain wood molding. There is a brick soldier-course stringcourse at the water table which has been painted to blend with the stucco finish. The gable has a louvered ventilation opening with a painted brick soldier-course sill.

The facade of this building is dominated by its projecting enclosed entry. It features a steeply pitched gable with plain projecting verges and a plain wood bargeboard. It has two small stepped wood casement windows. Both have six lights, but their sizes are varied. They have wood surrounds, lintels and lugsills. The entry also contains a single-leaf vertical plank wood door with a small rectangular leaded-glass window with a metal grill over it. The door is covered by an aluminum storm door. A concrete stoop and stairs with wrought iron railings access this entry. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, six over one, with wood surrounds, lintels and lugsills. The facade roofline features exposed rafter ends. The side gables have plain projecting verges with plain bargeboards. There is an exterior brick chimney on the west elevation, a screened-in projecting porch on the first level on the southeast corner and an open-frame recessed porch on the second level on the southeast corner. There is a one story frame room addition at the southwest corner of this building.

This building is very similar to the house across the street - 244 E. Adams. The facade of this building is dominated by its low double gables. These gables feature plain projecting eaves with plain bargeboards. One of the gables tops a sunroom. It has decorative wood brackets at its wall corners. There are two gabled dormers, directly opposite each other on the west and east elevations. The facade features an enclosed brick porch with jalousie windows. Concrete stairs with wrought iron railings access this porch. The entry door is obscured. A plain wood balustrade tops the porch. The facade gable also contains double jalousie windows. The windows of the sunroom are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, six over one, with wood mullions, brick soldier-course sills and plain wood molding. There is also a hooded entry on the west elevation with wood brackets.

This modest size home is dominated by its roof. A facade open-frame porch is included in the extension of the north leg of the gable. The gable roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice with a boxed and bracketed peak. Some of the fine features of this building include a bay window on the east elevation, stain-glass windows, an oriel window on the west elevation, and an inset hipped facade dormer with lattice windows. The facade veranda has wood tuscan columns with a plain wood balustrade. The porch floor is wood, and the porch stairs are rubble stone. The facade has two entries. Both entries are off-center on the west end of the facade. They contain single-leaf multi-paned wood doors. The door furthest west is covered by a wood storm door. The other door is covered by an aluminum storm door. The first story facade window is wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with a wood lintel, surrounds and sill. It is covered by an aluminum storm sash and flanked by shutters. The facade dormer has twin wood casement windows with wood surrounds and entablatures covered by aluminum screens. There is an open-frame entry porch located at the southwest corner at the rear of the building. There is also an irregular shaped 1 1/2 story projecting bay on the rear elevation.

This is a large house. Its facade is dominated by its slightly bellcast gable and its screened-in porch. The gable has plain projecting verges with flared bargeboards and a stucco and half-timber surface with small wood brackets at the bottom of each vertical timber member. Other features include an oriel window on the west elevation, a projecting multi-leveled bay on the east elevation which is topped by a secondary gable, stain-glass windows, a second floor balcony on the southeast corner, a bracketed blind oriel at the rear, a closed-in rear porch and deeply overhanging eaves with wood brackets. The facade full-width porch has a hipped roof with a bracketed gable over the entry. This gable also has a stucco and half-timber surface, plain projecting verges with plain bargeboards and exposed rafter ends. The porch rests on stuccoed piers with a solid stuccoed balustrade. The balustrade has been painted two tones so that the darker brown almost simulates the timbering on the gables. The porch has aluminum storm windows and door. The porch floor and stairs are concrete. The facade entry is off-center toward the east and contains a single-leaf multi-paned wood door with sidelights. The door and sidelights are topped by a single transom. To the west of the entry on the first level is a triple window which is wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, three over one, with wood mullions, molding and lugsill. The second level facade windows are double, wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, three over one, with plain wood molding and mullions and large wood lugsills. There is a cedar deck at the rear of this building.

This is a large home. Its prominent features include: its box-like appearance; its relatively low hipped roof with its central chimney and gabled dormer; and its open-frame wrap-around facade veranda. The veranda has a projecting roof supported by turned wood posts with a simple wood balustrade. The veranda floor and stairs are wood with iron stair railings. The facade entry is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf wood door covered by a wood screen door and flanked by wood louvered shutters. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, two over two, with wood molding and sills. The windows on all elevations on the first and second levels have working wood louvered shutters. The facade gable has a triple wood window unit. The center window is twice the height of the other two. It is double-hung, flat-topped, one over one. While its flanking windows are one light casement windows. These windows have wood surrounds and a wood lugsill. The building also has a second story screened-in sleeping porch at the northeast corner at the rear.

This building has been expanded toward the west. That is why the facade hipped dormer and the roof gablet set off-center on the roof. The original house was even with the projecting facade entry porch and sunroom. Because of this expansion the west elevation features a screened-in porch on its first level which is visible from the street. Even with the expansion, the house has retained its boxy shape. The facade has been altered to contain two entries. Both have single-leaf plain wood doors with three stepped lights near the top. They are covered by aluminum storm doors. The porch floor and stairs are concrete with a wrought iron stair railing. All of the facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood molding and lugsills. The windows on the second level are flanked by shutters.

This building has been altered to have a very rustic appearance. Prominent is its low wide gabled roof with its overhanging eaves with exposed rafter ends on the facade and rear elevations. The gables have plain projecting verges with plain bargeboards. The facade entry porch is open-frame with a roof that barely breaks from the pitch of the gable. It is supported by rustic wood posts with a rusticically plain wood railing which extends down the porch stairs and across the front of the house. The porch floor and side stairs are wood. The off-center facade entry contains a single-leaf wood panel door with six lights in its upper 1/3. It is covered by a wood storm door and flanked by wood louvered shutters. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, six over six, with plain wood molding and wood sills. They are flanked by wood shutters and covered with wood storm windows. There is an enclosed porch at the rear. There is a building shown on this lot on a 1909 map. However, this building does not stylistically appear to be that old.

244 W. Adams

The prominent features of this building include its box-like appearance, its low hipped roof with its overhanging boxed eaves, its gabled facade dormer with returns and its open-frame facade veranda. The original wall treatment has been covered with aluminum siding. The veranda has a projecting flat roof supported by wood columns which extend to a brick patio. The brick has been continued up the facade wall to the height of the entry stoop. The entry stoop and stairs are also brick with a wrought iron railing. The original elevated porch floor has been removed. The facade entry is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf wood door with a single pane of glass in its upper half. It is covered by an aluminum storm door and flanked by shutters which extend above the door as it is now, probably in line with what was a transom. This would also seem to be because of the position of the porch window. All the facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood surrounds and sills. The windows on the first and second levels are flanked by louvered shutters. There is a bay window on the west elevation. There is an open-frame entry porch at the rear of this building. This building is very like 245 W. Adams which is across the street from it.

The prominent features of this building include: its boxy appearance; its low hipped roof with its hipped facade dormer; and its open-frame facade veranda. There is also a cut-away bay on the west elevation. The facade veranda has a projecting flat roof supported by plain wood posts with a turned wood balustrade. The porch floor and stairs are wood. The entry is slightly off-center toward the east and contains a single-leaf wood door with decorative molding and a beveled oval light in its upper half. It is flanked by wood shutters. To the east of the entry is a wood lattice window with molded wood surrounds and a wood lugsill. This is a casement window. The west elevation also has two similar lattice windows. The remainder of the facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood molding, lugsills and shutters. The facade dormer window has been replaced and now contains an aluminum horizontal sliding window. The dormer is covered with wood shingles, and the rest of the house is covered with aluminum siding. The second level facade windows appear to have been altered. There are board and batten panels in place beneath them. They possibly gave access to a second story balcony which would explain the flat roof of the veranda. There is a one story frame addition at the rear of the building with a concrete foundation. It has a gabled roof and a wood deck.

The prominent features of this house include: its complex roof with its intersecting hips and secondary gables; its deeply overhanging eaves; its spindlework embellishments; and its asymmetrical facade due to a projecting facade bay. The low pitch to its roof probably dates the building around 1905 or later. There are decorative wood brackets at the corners of the eaves and along the porch roofline. It also features a facade entry porch and a bay window on the facade, topped by a balcony. The facade features two gables. One projects, has returns and is supported by turned wood posts which rest on the bay window/porch roof. The other facade gable is a wall gable. Both facade gables have circle-and-square decorative motifs which match the panels in place beneath the windows on the facade bay window. The facade porch projects from the angle formed by the intersection of the wings. Its flat roof rests on turned wood posts which extend to a concrete slab. There is evidence on the posts that an elevated porch floor has been removed. The porch is further embellished by a spindlework frieze and eastlake spandrels. The facade entry is off-center toward the east and contains a single-leaf plain wood door which is covered by an aluminum storm door. It is topped by a transom and has wood surrounds and lintel. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood sills. There is no visible evidence of moldings, surrounds or lintels, because of the vinyl siding. Decorative wood shutters flank the window above the facade entry. There is a one story frame room addition at the rear of this building with a gabled roof. It has a concrete foundation with evidence of a basement.

This building is dominated by its wide gambrel roof. It also features a facade entry porch whose shed roof is supported by wrought iron posts which extend to a concrete slab. There is a concrete stoop and stairs with wrought iron railings which access the entry. The entry contains a single-leaf wood door covered by a wood multi-paned storm door. The first level facade windows are double, and the attic level facade windows are triple. They are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, six over one, with plain wood molding and wood sills. The triple set is covered by wood screens. There is a rectangular louvered ventilation opening within the peak of the gambrel. There is an enclosed porch at the rear of the building.

This is a small structure which appears to have been something other than a house when it was first built. The facade is dominated by double parapet gables. Other features include its enclosed entry projection and attached buttresses at the facade corners. The entry is central and contains a new single-leaf wood panel door which is covered by a decorative aluminum storm door. There is one sidelight to the east of the door. The entry projection is flanked by narrow glass-block windows which are in turn flanked by wood shutters.

The facade of this building contains four storefronts and features red, brown and yellow textured brick. Each storefront features a single large plate-glass storefront window with a door containing a large pane of glass to the east of each storefront window. The storefront windows have brick soldier-course sills and flat brick lintels. The two central storefronts have transoms above their windows and doors. An aluminum awning overhangs the entire facade. The parapet is unadorned. The east elevation has been refaced with stucco, and the west elevation is red brick. A single story concrete block addition exists at the rear of 107 1/2 E. Argonne/Main.

A black and white photograph of a single-story commercial building. The building has a light-colored, textured facade. On the right side, there is a prominent sign with the words "H&R BLOCK" in large, bold, sans-serif letters, and "INCOME TAX" in a slightly smaller font below it. To the left of the sign, there is a large, dark, rectangular opening, possibly a drive-through or a large window, which is partially obscured by a wire-mesh screen. In front of the building, there is a paved area with some low-lying shrubs and a sidewalk. The sky is bright and overexposed, appearing almost white. Some tree branches are visible in the upper left corner.

The facade of this building contains two storefronts. Each storefront features a recessed entry with glass-in-metal single-leaf doors and transoms. Large plate glass and metal storefront windows flank these entries, existing within the entry recessions and adjacent to the sidewalk. Central is a triple storefront window set containing three large plate-glass and metal lights. The entire facade has been covered with buff glazed fire-brick except at the roofline which features a course of black glazed fire-brick. The attic story is unadorned except for hanging signs. The side elevations have brick supporting piers as in buttressing.

The prominent features of this building are: its side gambrel; large shed dormer; and two frame additions on the facade's east end (a two story addition with hooded entrance and a one story addition). The original entry is on the west end of the facade; featuring a wood, single-leaf door with three lights at the top of the door and a transom with three lights. A poured concrete stoop with stairs accommodates this entry, and it is sheltered by a bracketed, pedimented wood hood. All facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, three over one, flat-topped, with wood sills; some have wood shutters. The second story addition has a hipped roof and the one story addition is topped by a wood balustrade of geometric design (in disrepair). The roofline features a projecting cornice.

This building is oriented toward the west rather than the toward the street. Its prominent features are: an enclosed one story sun porch (probably an addition); a pair of half round windows contained within the gable ends; and a curve-hooded entry with a fan light and multi-paned side lights. The enclosed sun porch on the street facade (south) features double wood casement windows with eight lights in each window (now covered by aluminum storm sash). The second story openings above the sunporch appear to be wood doors with multi-lights, flanked by wood shutters. Also there are side posts evidencing a second story balcony, now removed. The west elevation features a central hooded entrance. The remainder of the windows are regularly spaced, wood with wood sash, double-hung, multi-paned, flat-topped, with wood sills. The roofline verges are close to the building. A 1980 one story frame addition exists at the rear (north) (see building permit #23M21-0424).

The prominent features of this building are: its pedimented front gable with a Palladian window; its gabled dormers; its hooded entry; and a cameo window and 1 and 1/2 story overhanging projection on the west elevation. The facade's entry is off-center with a wood door containing a single pane of glass in the upper half. It is protected by a wood gabled hood with a boxed cornice with return. A poured concrete stoop with stair accesses the entry; wrought-iron railings are in place. All facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, with wood lintels and sills and have wood shutters. The wood Palladian window set within the facade gable contains a round-arched central window which is double-hung, with wood sash and multi-paned; while the flanking windows are casement with eight lights. The roofline features a plain boxed cornice. There is a single story frame addition at the rear of the building.

This building originally matched 226 E. Argonne in plan and design.

The prominent features of this building are: its classical details such as its pedimented front gable with a Palladian window and its corner pilasters with Corinthian capitals; its gabled dormers; its varied use of siding materials; its distinctive facade porch; and the west elevation's cameo window and 1 and 1/2 story overhanging projection. The facade's entry is off-center with a wood door containing a single pane of glass in the upper half; topped by a transom. The facade is spanned by a porch with a distinctive curvilinear roof supported by wood columns with Ionic capitals. A rectangular poured concrete porch floor with a dressed stone foundation and concrete stairs access the entry; wrought-iron railings and balustrades are in place. All facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, with wood lintels and sills. The wood Palladian window set within the facade gable contains a round-arched central window which is double-hung, with wood sash and multi-paned; while the flanking windows are casement with eight lights. Wood shutters flank the second level facade windows as well as the main entrance door and the gable's Palladian window. The siding at the first level is wood horizontal lap-siding, and the second and attic levels are covered with wood shingles. A decorative shingle panel is in place between the windows of the second story facade. The roofline features a plain boxed cornice. There is a single story frame addition at the rear of the building.

This building originally matched 222 E. Argonne in plan and design.

The prominent features of this building are: its intersecting gambrels; its gambrel dormers; a projecting side bay consisting of a bracketed oriel topped by a bay dormer; and its facade porch. The facade has been altered (per a photograph in the possession of the owners and building permit #03622 dated March 21, 1955). Originally the porch spanned the entire facade wrapping the southeast corner and was, for the most part, contained beneath a deeply overhanging gambrel. The facade porch now only wraps the southeast corner and is wood open-framed with four planes fronting the street and one long plane on the east elevation. It consists of wood columns with doric capitals which rest on a closed frame balustrade which has been covered with wood shingles; the porch is topped by a wood balustrade of geometric design. The southwest corner of the facade is now enclosed to include an entry door with a surround of wood fluted-pilasters and wood entablature. It also includes a multi-paned stationary window with wood mullions. The second story facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, nine over one, topped with an extended wood shelf, featuring an extended wood sill. The facade gambrel still somewhat overhangs the first story. This building was originally covered with wood shingles, and a cameo window was contained within the facade gambrel at the attic level. A cameo window still exists in the gambrel on the east elevation. The roofline features a projecting cornice with a plain frieze.

The prominent features of this building are: its medium hipped roof; pedimented rounded bay at the second story; matched pedimented dormers; saw-tooth dentiling under roof cornice and in the facade pediment; and its veranda. An open-frame wood veranda spans the facade; its low hipped roof is supported by wood columns with doric capitals, and a wood geometric balustrade is in place. A central entry contains a wood door with a round arched opening containing panes of glass divided into a gothic configuration; a similar configuration is contained within the half-round window of the facade pediment. All other facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, three over one, with wood sills; all but the attic level windows have wood shutters. The first story windows also feature plain heavy wood lintels. The dormers contain board and batten siding within the pedimented gable; the remainder of the elevations are covered with wood horizontal lap-siding. The roofline features a projecting boxed cornice.

The prominent features of this building are its side gables, its shed dormers and its facade veranda. The facade has a central entry with a wood, single-leaf door containing a single pane of glass in the upper half; topped by a transom. A wood multi-paned storm door covers the entry. The facade veranda has a shed roof which is supported by wood Doric columns resting on a wood floor; wood balustrades and wrought iron stair railings are in place. The first story windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, nine over one, with plain surrounds. The facade dormer features a double set of windows which are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over six, flat-topped, with a wood sill. Wood shutters flank the entry and the dormer windows on the facade. The roofline features a projecting cornice. A single story frame addition exists at the rear.

The prominent features of this building are its complex and picturesque roofline consisting of steeply pitched intersecting gables, a bay window beneath a second story projection and dissimilar porches. The facade features a projecting, open-frame, wood porch whose gabled roof is an extension of the facade gable. Carved wood scroll work is in place at the posts. The entry is recessed with a single-leaf wood door containing a single pane of glass in the upper 1/2; it is topped by a transom containing a single pane of glass. An aluminum storm door covers the wood entry door. The first level facade also features a three-sided bay with windows on each side. The central window of wood is stationary containing a large single pane of glass topped by a transom. All other windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood slipsills; some also have wood shutters. The attic level window in the facade gable is wood with wood sash, double-hung, four over four, flat-topped, with a wood slipsill. The roofline features a projecting cornice. A single story frame addition exists at the rear.

The storefront entry and storefront windows were altered in 1947. Building permit # 1425, dated April 29, 1947 shows the alteration to include "brick and glass blocks." Another reference to this permit refers to a "new store front" at a estimated cost of $500.00.<sup>1</sup> A recessed central entry contains a wooden door. To the east of the door is a plate glass cabinet window with wood panels below. A recessed brick panel is in place below a tripartite parapet. A one story L shaped brick addition exists at the rear, c.1941.<sup>2</sup>

The three storefront bays of the facade of 119 have been infilled with masonry. On the facade of 117 new large single-pane storefront windows flank a central wood single-leaf door which contains a single pane of glass. Board and batten siding spans the bottom 1/4 of both facades, unifying them. They share a common wall. 119 has a louvered ventilation opening below the gable. The roofline of 117 features a tripartite parapet. A one story concrete block addition exists at the rear.

Firehouse No. 1

The facade's first level features a triple storefront window containing large single panes of glass which are separated by wood mullions. To the east of this is the entrance which contains a single-leaf wood door. This entire grouping, the triple window and entrance, are within what was once a large opening for the firehouse. Flanking this are two small wood pivot windows with wood sash and clay tile sills. The second floor windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over six, flat-topped, with brick course sills. A clay-tiled hipped false-roof overhangs these windows; with wood brackets and modillions. Above this is a tripartite parapet with a shield with "No. 1" on it. The facade also features brick quoins. A concrete shed on the roof, once used to hang fire hoses, indicates the original use of the building as a firehouse. This building has been joined (in the gangway) with 125 W. Argonne/Main so that the two buildings together are used by Messenger Printing. Two one story masonry additions exist at the rear.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE:

Firehouse No. 1 - 123 W. Argonne/Main

The Kirkwood Volunteer Fire Company No. 1 was organized on April 30, 1904. Despite the valiant efforts of this fire department Kirkwood still suffered a number of losses due to fire each year; and in December, 1916, the Missouri Rating Board advised the residents of Kirkwood that without more water mains and the establishment of a paid fire department, insurance rates would have to be raised. To facilitate the decision to do something about this the Kirkwood Volunteer Fire Company announced that it would disband as of April 18, 1918, and at the same time urged the immediate establishment of a paid department. Recommendations were made by a joint committee from the Board of Aldermen and the Volunteer Fire Company to the Board of Aldermen, and passed on at a mass meeting of Kirkwood residents held February 26, 1918. The voters shortly thereafter authorized a paid fire department and the issuance of $15,000 in bonds for the construction of a fire house. Fred Howell was awarded the contract to construct the new firehouse for $7,900. Along with the building of Firehouse No. 1 came the decision to purchase machine-driven vehicles. (The volunteers were still using a horse-drawn engine when they decided to disband in 1918.) On December 8, 1919 voters approved the issue of $35,000 in bonds for water main improvements. Early in February, 1920, the new fire house was completed and as soon as the water mains were enlarged, the insurance rates were lowered.

The prominent features of this building are its classical details. The entrance is on the southwest corner of the facade. It contains a new single-leaf wood door flanked by wood panels. Stationary transoms with three sections of eight radiating lights and bracketed wood shelves are in place over the entry and storefront windows. Brick piers containing fluted wooden pilasters divide the bays on the facade. A wood entablature spans the facade above the entry and storefront windows. Above this, the spaces between the pilasters contain recessed brick panels. A wood pediment crowns the center of the facade. This building has been joined (in the gangway) with 123 W. Argonne/Main so that the two buildings together are used by Messenger Printing. Two masonry additions have been made to the rear of the building - 1966 and 1969.

Jecemiah's Custard Station

This building is dominated by its steeply pitched gable. It features an exterior chimney on its street elevation. Rather than being oriented toward the street, it is facing east. A slight sweeping cornice overhang on the east elevation serves as a small protective covering for the entry and a window. The entry contains a single-leaf wood door. To its south is a wide window opening with a brick soldier-course sill which is now filled with two order windows with stainless steel counters. Both the door and the order windows are covered by a canvas awning. The north elevation also contains a wide window opening with a brick soldier-course sill which is now filled with one order window with a stainless steel counter. It also contains a wood panel with the words "Jecemiah's Custard Station." There is a canvas awning in place above this window opening. There is a rectangular louvered ventilation opening in the gable. The gable roofline does not project.

The facade features a store front at the first level which has been altered to contain two large plate-glass storefront windows. To the east of these windows is a wood single-leaf door containing a narrow pane of glass in the center; a wood panel is in place above. To the west of the storefront windows is the entry to the second level apartments. It also contains a wood single-leaf door with a narrow pane of glass in the center. A wood projecting overhang with dentiling beneath separates the first and second levels. Second story windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped within segmental arches, with stone sills. There is evidence of brick corbeling at the roofline that has been covered with a cement-like wall finish.

The facade of this building features a central wood single-leaf door containing a large single pane of glass flanked by large plate-glass storefront windows. A five light transom spans the storefront; containing semi-transparent panels. Metal siding covers a curved projection - probably once a marquis. Vitrolite panels are in place below the windows and at the corners of the facade.

The facade of this building accommodates two storefronts on the first level.

159 features a storefront angled to the intersection which contains double wood doors with large single panes of glass, flanked by sidelights containing a pane of glass with a wood panel below. The Clay Street elevation also features a large multi-paned wood storefront window which is part of this storefront. 157 features a wooden storefront which matches 159 in style. Large single pane storefront windows span the entire facade except where entry doors are seen. On the southeast corner of the facade (155) a single-leaf six-panel wood door with a transom accesses the second story.

At the second level 159 contains two regularly spaced wood windows, with wood sashes, double-hung, two over two, flat-topped, with wood sills. A tiled gable with return projects above. 157 contains three windows whose openings have been reduced to contain standard-size windows with wood infill panels at the top. These windows are wood, with wood sash, double-hung, two over two, flat-topped with wood sills. The small window above 155 shows evidence of having been a door opening; it now contains a wood window with wood sash, double-hung, four over four, flat-topped, with wood sill. All second level windows are covered by aluminum storm sash. The roofline of 155-157 features a roof-like overhang which is covered with asphalt shingles.

The Clay Street elevation contains an entry to the basement level.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE:

155, 157, 159 W. Argonne/Main

This building contained the Heinzelmann's General Store which was established in 1899 by Leo E. Heinzelmann. There had been a fire in the building at 156 W. Argonne/Main, where the family operated the family business, Heinzelmann's Bakery, which was founded by Rudolph Heinzelmann in 1875. Leo Heinzelmann reopened an expanded business in this building. It featured a second story balcony which spanned the facade and wrapped around onto the Clay Street elevation; now removed. The roofline above 155-157 was a side gable. Clay tiles have been added to the 159 roofline and a stucco finish has been applied to the original wood horizontal lap siding.

The prominent features of this building include its cast iron and wood store fronts and pressed-metal cornice with decorative brackets. A foundry mark on the cast iron front credits Banner Iron Works, St. Louis. The facade contains three storefronts and an entrance to the second level offices. Each storefront features recessed double-leaf wood panel doors with large panes of glass in their upper 2/3, topped by a transom. These are flanked by large display windows topped by transoms. Two of the storefronts have a band of four lights beneath these display windows. The third storefront has wood panels in that area. The entry to the second level offices contains a single-leaf wood panel door with nine lights in its upper half. It is topped by a two-light transom. The metal frieze above the transoms features rosettes. The storefronts have cast iron pilasters and attached columns. The second level contains seven regularly spaced windows. These are wood windows with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one. They are set within segmental brick arches. A brick stringcourse follows a course at the top of these windows, conforming to their arched tops. There is another brick stringcourse along the bottoms of these windows. An opening in the east wall accommodates an attached train car/shop. The rear of this building has a very irregular plan.

4.3. HISTORIC SIGNIFICANCE

156 W. Argonne/Main

Rudolph Heinzelmann established Heinzelmann's Bakery at the southeast corner of Clay and Main Streets (Argonne) in 1875. After a fire in 1899, Leo E. Heinzelmann, the son of the founder, bought the property on the opposite corner of Clay and Main Streets. He expanded the business to include bakery goods, groceries and meats and later on a drug store. This explains the 1890s facade of this building and its presence on an 1878 Map. Ms. Suzanne Swoboda, the current owner, says that there are charred beams in the basement in the center of the building.

This is a large home. The prominent features are: its high front gable with its modified returns and bracketed wood shelf which forms a pediment at the peak; its gabled dormers of varied sizes; its greatly projecting plain boxed cornice; its bracketed jettied second level its closed-in facade porch; and its projecting side bay and side window bay. The entry is central and it contains a wood screen door. The inner door is not visible from the outside. The porch windows are metal and glass, one over one. The triple window of the second level is wood with wood sash, wood mullions, double-hung, six over one, flat-topped, with wood surrounds and lugsill. The attic window is a wood casement window with 15 lights, with wood surrounds and lugsill and a simple entablature. The side elevation contains a lattice window. There is a one story frame addition at the rear.

The prominent features of this building include: its intersecting gables; its facade window bay; and its closed-in porch. The porch has been closed in with jalousie windows in aluminum. Wrought iron posts support a shed porch roof. The porch foundation is poured concrete. The remaining facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood sills. They have been covered with aluminum storm sash. The facade window bay has a hipped roof. The only visible entry is the glass in metal single-leaf porch door. The roofline features a plain slightly projecting boxed cornice.

This is large home. Its prominent features include: its high pedimented gables with Tudor embellishments; its side pedimented gable dormers; its east elevation oriel; its one story projecting bay on the west elevation which is topped by a balcony with a wood balustrade; its varied wall finishes; and its open-frame facade veranda. The veranda has a hipped roof with a pedimented gable. It rests on wood posts with a wood balustrade and stair railings. There are two sets of stairs accessing the veranda, one under the veranda pediment and one on the veranda's east side. The current owner stated that they replaced inappropriate wrought iron posts. The veranda floor and stairs are concrete. The entrance is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf wood door with a single pane of glass in its upper half. It has wood surrounds and entablature. It is covered by a wood screen door. There is a triple window to the east of the facade entry. It is wood with wood sash, surrounds, lugsill, mullions and entablature. The center window is double-hung and is eight over one. It is flanked by sidelights containing single panes of glass. The window to the west of the facade entry is a wood casement window with wood surrounds, sill and entablature. It contains six lights. The second level facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, eight over twelve, with wood lugsills, lintels, surrounds and shutters. The facade attic level window is wood with wood sash, double-hung, eight over eight, with wood surrounds, sill and lintel. All facade windows are covered by aluminum storm windows. The facade pedimented gable has a half-timber and stucco finish. The pediment cornice between the second and attic levels features regularly spaced wood brackets. The roofline features plain projecting verges with an extended bargeboard on the facade pediment. There is a small single story frame addition at the rear of the building.

This is a large home. Its prominent features include: its squat bellcast hipped roof; its bellcast hipped dormers; its greatly overhanging bracketed cornices; its varied wall treatments; and its open-frame facade veranda. The facade veranda has a hipped roof which rests on stylized wood posts which rest on elephantine wood piers. The veranda has a wood balustrade and floor, and the stairs are concrete. The facade entry is off-center toward the east. It contains a single-leaf wood door with a single pane of glass in the upper 1/3 of the door. It is covered by an aluminum storm door. The door surrounds are wood. Flanking the door are two small wood casement windows with single lights. They have wood surrounds, lintels and lugsills. The first level window on the west end of the facade is wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over two, with wood surrounds, lugsill and lintel. The second level facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood lugsills and surrounds. A plain frieze under the roof cornice serves as a lintel for these windows. The facade dormer contains a triple wood casement window set with wood mullions, surrounds and sill. The one toward the east is a leaded window with multi-lights, and the two toward the west contain single lights. The first story as well as the base of the veranda is distinguished from the second level by the use of wood horizontal lap siding. Stucco and half-timber has been used on the second level. There is a small single story frame addition at the rear of the building.

This is one of the smaller homes on the block. Its prominent features include its tri-gable roofline and closed-in facade porch. The facade porch contains wood and glass fixed windows and an aluminum storm door. The porch floor and stairs are poured concrete. The recessed facade entry is off-center toward the east. It contains a single-leaf wood raised panel door with a single pane of glass in the upper half. It is topped by a transom containing a single pane of glass. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood lugsills. They are covered by aluminum storm sash. A small rectangular ventilation opening is in place within the facade gable. The roofline features a plain slightly projecting boxed cornice. There are two one story additions at the rear. The older addition is stuccoed and the newer addition is concrete over concrete block.

This is a small home. Its interesting roofline is hipped with an intersecting front gable, and a hipped dormer. Another prominent feature is its open-frame facade porch which has a shed roof, turned wood posts with Eastlake detailing and a wood floor and stairs. The facade entry is centered and contains a single-leaf raised panel door with decorative molding and a single light in its upper 1/2. It is topped by a transom. The first level facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood surrounds and lugsills. The attic level facade windows are wood casement windows containing six by six lights, with wood mullions, surrounds, lintels and sills. The roofline features a slightly projecting plain boxed cornice. There is a single story frame addition at the rear of the building. The wing toward the east with the hipped roof is probably also an addition. Its facade window is wider than the other facade window; and its foundation butts up to the other foundation rather than dovetailing into it, even though it is also stone.

The prominent features of this house include: its symmetry; its central chimney; its hipped facade dormer; and its facade porch. The facade porch has a shed roof which rests on turned wood posts with a geometric wood balustrade. The porch floor and stairs are wood. The entry slightly projects and is centered. It contains a single-leaf wood door with decorative molding, a single pane of glass in the upper 1/2 and is topped by a transom. It is covered by an aluminum storm door. The facade windows on the first level are wood with wood sash, double-hung, two over two, flat-topped, with wood surrounds and lugsills. The facade windows on the second level are wood casement windows with a two light configuration, flat-topped, with wood surrounds and slipsills. The facade dormer windows are wood casement windows with a single light and wood mullion, sill, surround and lintel. All facade windows are covered by aluminum storm windows. The roofline features a projecting plain boxed cornice. There is a one story frame breeze-way addition at the rear which connects the house with a one story frame garage.

The prominent features of this building are: its greatly overhanging eaves; its gable bargeboard which emphasizes the broadness of the gable; its side shed dormers; and its facade porch which is closed-in. The windows on the porch are aluminum, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with narrow wood surrounds and mullions and brick soldier-course sills. The porch floor and stairs are concrete. The facade entrance is off-center toward the east and contains a single-leaf wood door with a single pane of glass in the upper 1/2. Flanking the door are two small casement windows containing leaded glass with brick soldier-course sills. These windows are flat-topped. To the west of the entry on the first level is a triple window set which is wood, flat-topped, with wood surrounds and mullions and brick soldier-course sills. The center window is double-hung with an eight over one light configuration. It is flanked by fixed sidelights. The facade attic level windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over one, flat-topped, with wood mullions, surrounds, lintels and lugsills.

The prominent features of this house include its single hipped dormer and its open-frame facade veranda. There are indications that a shed roof has partially been removed from the veranda. The roof rests on narrow wood columns of the tuscan order. The veranda has a wood floor and concrete stairs. The facade entrance is off-center toward the east and contains a single-leaf wood door with a large oval light. It is covered by an aluminum storm door. The first and second story facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped with wood surrounds, sills and lintels. The dormer windows are wood casement windows with flat-tops, single lights and wood surrounds, sill and lintel. The roofline features a projecting plain boxed cornice. There is a single story frame addition at the rear of this building with a concrete foundation. It has been covered with tar paper.

The facade's first level features an off-center recessed entrance flanked by plate-glass storefront windows. The door is wood, single-leaf, with a single large pane of glass. The storefront windows within the entry recessions are angled diagonally toward the door. Above the storefront windows which are adjacent to the sidewalk and above the recessed entry there is a triple transom containing patterned semi-opaque glass. Small vents are in place beneath the windows at this level. To the south of the storefront is the entrance to the second level apartments. It contains a wood single-leaf panel door with a transom. A wood bracketed shelf distinguishes the first and second levels.

The facade's second level windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over one, flat-topped, with brick-course sills. The lintels above the double windows above the storefront are reminiscent of the bracketed wood shelf that spans the facade between the first and second levels. The window above the apartment entrance is set within a recessed round-arched panel. A round-arched blind window exists between the the double window sets. Its rounded arch is echoed in the roofline parapet.

This building is of the I-house-plus-shed-addition plan. It is dominated by its front-facing gable which is somewhat unusual in a suburban setting. It also features multi-paned windows and a Colonial facade entry. The facade entry is off-center toward the south. It features a flush door and framework. The door is a single-leaf wood panel door with two small lights at the top. It is covered by an aluminum storm door. Its surrounds are fluted pilasters, and it is topped by a simple wood entablature with a flat broken pediment. A concrete stoop and stair access this entry. The large window to the north of the entry is a stationary wood window. It is flat-topped, with plain wood molding, a wood planter box and thirty lights. Three fixed aluminum storm windows cover this window. The remainder of the facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, six over six, with plain wood molding and wood slipsills. They are flanked by decorative wood shutters and covered by aluminum storm sash. The roofline of the gable features a projecting plain boxed cornice. The facade roofline of the shed addition does not project, but the roofline does project slightly on the north elevation of the shed addition.

This small structure features side gables with a secondary facade wall gable with returns and a massed plan. For the most part the original building has been covered by perma stone. Its central facade entry is accented by a cottage-style gabled hood which is supported by wood brackets. This hood has an extended south leg. The facade entry contains a single-leaf wood door with a large single pane of glass. It is covered by an aluminum storm door. A concrete stoop accesses this entry. Symmetrically placed facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, two over two, with plain wood molding and perma stone sills. They are flanked by wood shutters. They are topped by perma stone radiating voussoirs. There is a one story stuccoed room addition to the northeast corner at the rear of this building with a shed roof. It has an entry on its north elevation. There are also entries on the south and rear elevations of the building.

This is a relatively small gable-and-wing plan folk building. Its prominent front gable has returns. Porches are tucked into the angles formed by the intersection of the wing. Also featured are a variety of wall textures, a pedimented facade dormer and an asymmetrical facade. The facade porch has a shed roof supported by turned wood posts with jig-saw spandrels. The porch has a wood floor and stairs. There are two facade entries. One is on the facade of the intersecting wing, and the other is on the south elevation of the front-gabled bay. The entry on the south wing contains a single-leaf wood panel door with a single pane of glass in its upper half. It is covered by an aluminum storm door. It has wood surrounds and a wood lintel. The other entry contains a single-leaf six-panel door with wood surrounds. The facade window to the south of the entry on the south wing has been altered to contain a single large pane of glass. It has wood surrounds, lintel and lugsill. The remainder of the facade windows on the first level are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood entablatures, lugsills and surrounds. They are flanked by wood shutters, and they are covered by wood storm windows. The facade gable window is wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, two over two, with wood entablature, lugsill and surrounds. The facade dormer contains a two leaf wood casement window. Each leaf contains four lights. It is flat-topped, with a wood lugsill and plain wood molding. The rear porch has been enclosed. The roofline features a projecting plain boxed cornice with a plain wood frieze beneath.

This house has been greatly expanded because of a two story addition toward the south. The original structure's foundation material is stone, while the addition's foundation material is concrete. The prominent features of this building include its interesting roofline with intersecting gable and truncated hip and its open-frame facade veranda. The facade veranda has a shed roof which rests on turned wood posts, eastlake details, a wood balustrade, floor and stairs and a wrought iron stair railing. The facade entrance is slightly off-center toward the south and contains a single-leaf wood door with multi-lights and decorative wood surrounds and lintel. The door is covered by a wood screen door. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood surrounds, lugsills and lintels. The roofline features a projecting plain boxed cornice.

This is a large home. Its prominent features are: a complex roofline to include many large gables, shed dormers and a truncated hip; its open-frame wrap-around facade veranda; its window bay on the south elevation; and its projecting bays. A pyramidal chimney projects from a gable on the south elevation. The veranda has a low hipped roof which rests on wood columns with doric capitals. The floor is wood, and the stairs are concrete. The facade entry is recessed, off-center toward the north. It contains a single-leaf panel wood door with two small lights at the top. It is covered by a wood screen door. The facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood sills. The window on the first level of the facade's projecting bay has wood shutters. The facade gable window is a wood casement window with a wood sill and a wood entablature. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice. There is a one story frame addition with a concrete foundation and vertical wood siding at the rear of the building.

The prominent features of this building are: its high front pedimented gable; its hipped dormer on the north elevation; its roofline with its plain projecting boxed cornice; and its open-frame wrap-around facade veranda. The facade entry is off-center towards the north, and contains a single-leaf wood door topped by a transom which contains a wood panel. This entry is covered by an aluminum storm door. To the north of the door is a small fixed wood window with wood sill and wood surround. It contains a single piece of beveled glass, and it is flat-topped. The other first level window on the facade is a large plate-glass fixed wood window with plain wood surrounds and lintel and a wood sill; it is also flat-topped. The second and attic level facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood sills. The second level windows have wood shutters. The facade veranda has a hipped roof which rests on slightly elephantine wood posts. It has a wood floor with concrete stairs. It wraps around onto both side elevations. There is a one story addition at the rear of this building.

This is a very large dwelling featuring irregular massing, triangular dormers, a truncated hipped roof, bay windows, a hooded facade balcony, projecting bays, an open-frame facade porch and traditional varied siding material. The recessed facade entry is now centered due to the addition of a one story frame room addition toward the north. This addition has a stone foundation and a bellcast roof with a flat top. The facade entry contains a single-leaf raised panel wood door with a Queen Anne window in its upper 1/3. It is topped by a transom which contains a decorative wood panel. The door has a wood surround and simple wood entablature. The facade porch has a hipped roof which rests on wood posts. It has a wood floor with concrete stairs and a wood closed balustrade. Vertical tongue and groove siding which is the same height as the porch balustrade flanks the entry. To the south of the porch on the first level the facade features a three-sided bay window which is under a projecting second story. It has a window on each of its three sides. The windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped. The window angled toward the porch is topped by a simple wood entablature like that of the door. Raised wood panels are beneath the bay windows. A continuous wood band on this bay serves as the sill for these windows. The window in the room addition is wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, with a wood sill. The second level windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, with wood surrounds and lugsills, topped by simple wood entablatures. They have a typical Queen Anne light configuration; i.e. the top sash contains a band of ribbon windows above a large pane of glass, and the bottom sash contains one pane of glass. The facade dormer window is wood, with wood surrounds and a simple entablature. It contains three lights. The primary covering for the first level is wood horizontal lap siding. The second level features wood shingles with a three-course band of three-edged imbricated wood shingles. The facade dormer contains imbricated fish scale wood shingles. All the facade windows are covered with aluminum storm sash. The entry is covered with an aluminum storm door.

The prominent features of this building are: its symmetry; its hipped roof and hipped side and front dormers; and its facade porch. The roof of the porch is hipped; it rests on slightly elephantine wood posts; and the porch floor and stairs are wood. All rooflines feature projecting cornices. All facade windows are wood with wood sash, now covered by aluminum stormsash. They are flat-topped with wood sills. The single window to the north of the entrance as well as the attic level windows are casement with a three over one light configuration. The double windows on the facade's first and second levels are double-hung with a four over one light configuration and wood shutters (except for a missing shutter on the second floor north window). The entry is off-center toward the north and contains a wood single-leaf door with a large beveled oval light. The door is covered by an aluminum storm door. There is a two story addition at the rear of the building.

42. Further Description of Important Features The front section is a simple 5 by 2 bay rectangle with a cross gable roof. The gable that faces the front makes a pedimented portico over the center three bays. The portico is supported by four, square antae. A simple wooden railing with square spindles connects these posts. The center-bay front door is surrounded by sidelights and a transom containing 6 lights. The windows are double hung, 6 over 6, with old glass, and have simple wooden frames.
43. History and Significance William B. Swan bought Lot 8 from the Kirkwood Association. He served in the Union Army during the Civil War. His four daughters, Grace, Ada, Lizzie and Lily are mentioned at Kirkwood social functions until the turn of the century. Wm. Hoeman, an optician, and his family lived here from the 1920's until the 1970's. Mrs. Hoeman was a seamstress.
44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings The house is on a wooden corner lot.

The prominent features of this large house include: its low-pitched hipped roof with broadly overhanging boxed eaves with decorative paired brackets beneath; its distinction between the heights of the windows on the two stories; and its facade symmetry. There may have been a second story balcony on the facade. There is a central entry at that level containing a single-leaf wood double-panel door with two lights in the upper half. It is covered by a wood screen door and topped by a wood entablature with plain wood surrounds. The facade veranda is screened-in and it features wood posts with stylized capitals. Its floor and stairs are wood. The veranda shares a flat roof with a three sided bay window. The bay window features molded wood panels. The first level entry is central and contains a single-leaf wood panel door with two long etched glasses. It is topped by a transom with a wood entablature and plain wood surrounds. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, two over two, with wood surrounds, entablatures and lugsills. The second level windows have working louvered wood shutters. There is a plain wood frieze beneath the roofline cornice. There is a two story frame addition at the rear of this building with a low hipped roof and a concrete foundation.

The prominent features of this building are its symmetry and porticoed facade entrance. The facade entry is central and contains a single-leaf wood door with sidelights and a fan-light transom. Its portico features wood columns of the tuscan order topped by a gable with a plain boxed cornice with return. The first and second level facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, eight over eight, with flat brick lintels and brick soldier-course sills. The facade basement level windows are wood with four lights. A stringcourse of brick soldier-coursing separates the basement level from the first floor. A white glazed terra cotta stringcourse and cornice molding separate the second floor from the parapet which is unadorned except for coping tiles at the roofline.

This is a large home. Its prominent features are; its complex roofline with its dominant front-facing gable; its asymmetrical facade; and its avoidance of a smooth-walled appearance. It has patterned shingles, a cut-away bay window on the facade, a second floor balcony tucked under the facade gable, a two story projecting bay on the west elevation, a gabled dormer and a partially recessed open-frame wrap-around facade veranda. The veranda's roof is gabled on its west elevation. It is supported by wood notched posts with eastlake spandrels. The veranda has a plain wood balustrade and a wood floor and stairs. The facade entry is recessed and off-center toward the west. It contains a single-leaf wood door with decorative molding and a single pane of glass in its upper half, with wood surrounds and a wood entablature. The entry is topped by a transom. The central window of the facade's cut-away bay window is wood with wood sash, double-hung. Its top sash is proportionally smaller than its bottom sash, and it is leaded. The bottom sash contains a single light. This window has wood surrounds and a wood lugsill. Flanking this window on the bay are wood windows with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood surrounds, lintels and lugsills. The second level facade windows are the same. The facade gable contains a pair of wood casement windows, multi-paned, with wood surrounds and lintels. They share a lugsill. Above these windows the gable is boxed-in and covered with patterned wood shingles. The gable of the veranda is also covered in a like manner. The roofline features a plain boxed cornice with a plain frieze. There is a one story frame addition at the rear of this building with an irregular roofline.

Prominent features of this building are its irregular massing, steeply pitched gables, projecting bays and its varied roofline and fenestration. On the facade the entry is in a recessed bay; contains a wood, single-leaf door with decorative wood panels and multi-panes of glass. A transom is in place above which also contains multi-panes of glass in a configuration reminiscent of the door. There is also a wood screen door with Eastlake detailing. To the east of this entrance is a diamond shaped fixed window. The original porch has apparently been altered; the porch floor has been removed and presently there are three graduated brick stairs at the door and the porch posts (wood) extend to a ground level brick patio. The windows on the 2 and 1/2 story projecting bay are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood lugsills. Note also that the windows on this projecting bay are located in a projection on the projecting bay. The gable window on this projection is wood with a wood sash, double-hung, one over one, within a tripartite arch, with a wood lugsill. The other second level facade windows are wood, with wood sash, double-hung, two over two, flat-topped, with wood lugsills. All the flat-topped windows of the facade have wood shutters. The central bay of this facade also features a pyramidal dormer containing a triangular wood fixed window; a wood mullion divides it vertically. The roofline features a boxed plain cornice with a plain frieze. There is a single story frame addition at the rear.

This building originally matched 226 E. Jefferson in design and plan.

The prominent features of this home include: its box-like plan; its squat hipped roof with its hipped dormer; the irregular placement of facade openings; and its open-frame wrap-around facade veranda. It also features an oriel window on the west elevation and a two story projecting bay on the east elevation. The veranda's projecting roof is supported by wood tuscan columns. There is a plain wood balustrade and wood floor and stairs with iron stair railings. The entry is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf wood door with a large single pane of glass. It is topped by a transom, and it is covered by a wood screen door. It has wood surrounds and a plain wood lintel. The facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood surrounds, lugsills and lintels. The facade dormer contains a wood double-leaf casement window with one over one lights in each leaf and no mullion. It has wood surrounds, lintel and lugsill. The roofline features a projecting plain boxed cornice with a plain frieze beneath. There is a one story frame addition at the rear of this building.

Prominent features of this building are its irregular massing, steeply pitched gables, 2 and 1/2 story projecting bays, its open-frame wrap-around wood porch with turned posts and its varied roofline and fenestration. On the facade the entry is in the central bay; contains a wood, six-panel, single-leaf door. A transom is in place above, which contains a single pane of glass. To the east of this entrance is a wood double casement window; flat-topped, wood lugsill, each window containing six lights. The two story recessed bay to the east of the central bay contains wood windows, with wood sashes, double-hung, two over two (second story) and two over four (first story), flat-topped, with wood lugsill/threshold; the window at the first level extends to the porch floor. The second story window above the entry on the central bay is also wood, with wood sash, double-hung, two over two, flat-topped, with wood lugsills. The windows on the 2 and 1/2 story gabled bay at the first and second levels are wood, with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, with wood mullions, flat-topped, with wood lugsills. Note also that the windows on this projecting bay are located in a projection on the projecting bay. The gable window on this projection is wood with a wood sash, double-hung, one over one, within a tripartite arch, with a wood lugsill. The central bay of this facade also features a pyramidal dormer containing a triangular wood fixed window; a wood mullion divides it vertically. The roofline features a boxed plain cornice with a plain frieze. There is evidence of a lower balustrade that has been removed from the open-frame facade porch.

This building originally matched 212 E. Jefferson in design and plan.

Prominent features of this building include its half-timbering, numerous prominent gables, a large medieval chimney, multi-paned lattice windows, irregular fenestration and varied wall textures. The facade features a wood, open-frame, wrap-around porch with a pediment with tudor detailing in place above the entry. The entry door is wood, with two small panes of glass in the upper 1/4 of the door and two decorative wood panels in the lower 3/4 of the door. The entry also features a picturesque half-sidelight. To the east of the entry at the first level is an expansive window; wood, with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with a wood lugsill. To the west of the entry at the first level is a single window; wood, casement, multi-paned, lattice, flat-topped. The recessed projecting bay at the first level contains a window; wood, with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with a wood lugsill. The siding at the first level is wood in horizontal bands of three. The second level facade fenestration consists of: a small, wood, multi-paned, lattice, casement window off-center above the entry; a set of double-windows which are wood, with wood sashes, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood lugsills and lattice transoms; and on the projecting bay a window which is wood, with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, with flat top and wood lugsill. The second level siding is wood shingle. The facade gable contains a half-timber and stucco finish; and it is separated from the second level by a wood cornice supported by decorative, regularly spaced, wood brackets. Also contained within this gable is a set of four windows; wood, multi-paned, lattice, flat-topped, wood slipsill, wood mullions. Finials exist at the peaks of the facade gable and the porch pediment.

the cross gable. The front door is in the center bay and the east bay is a French door. A one-story front porch with a hip roof supported by Doric columns shelters the two eastern bays on the front and wraps around onto the first two bays on the eastern side. This porch was screened on the east side.

The east side has two bays under a gable on its front, south end. Recessed one bay, is the lower two-story addition which projects from the center of the back in the shape of a T with a hip roof. The leg of the T is the center of the east side and contains four bays. Its first floor is a screened porch. The top of the T is two bays on the east and west sides and three bays across the back.

The west side is similar to the east side except it does not have porches and it has a one-story bay window with a hip roof in the second bay from the south.

the president of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange and had owned some riverboats. During the Civil War he fought for the Confederacy with his good friend, Alfred Douglas Donavan. The two men promised each other that if either of them died in the war the other one would take care of his family. Donavan died near the end of the war and Harlow Phelps brought Donavan's family with him to Kirkwood and raised them with his own. One of the boys raised by Phelps, Douglas Donavan, was the builder of the Kirkwood Station. He lost money on the project because he ran into quicksand. He thought so much of Mr. Phelps that he named his first son Harlow Phelps Donavan.

The home belonged to a family named Floyd from around 1906 until 1916. The lot ran through to Adams with a big barn and garden behind the house.

The prominent features of this building are its side gable, dormers, porches, bay window and general symmetry and tight proportions. The facade features a projecting, open frame wood porch topped by a wood balustrade at the second story. The entry has probably been altered from a single door with sidelights (typical colonial motif) to a wood, six-panel, single-leaf door with a wood stormdoor containing 8 lights; now surrounded by vertical wood panels. A three sided bay window exists to the east of the entry containing a large, wood, multi-paned, fixed window and two windows of wood, with wood sash, double-hung, multi-paned, with wood sills. This bay window unit is topped by a hipped roof. The second level contains two sets of double windows of wood with wood sash, nine over nine, double-hung, flat-topped, with wood lintels and wood lugsills. The dormers are symmetrically placed with overhanging gables and contain single, wood, multi-paned casement windows with flat-tops and wood lugsills. The second level slightly overhangs the first level. All elevations are covered by wood shingles. On the eastern elevation there is an open frame screened-in porch with wood columns in the doric order. A single, wood, french door opens onto this porch.

This structure contains several storefronts on its north (Jefferson) and west elevations. The Jefferson elevation's storefronts feature recessed entries with wood doors with multi-lights. These entries are flanked by storefront windows. Adjacent to the sidewalk these windows are triple, casement, with wood mullions. Suite 102 has applied mullions to the inside of these windows to create a multi-light effect similar to that of the door. Wood panels are in place above the windows and door on this elevation. The northwest corner features a recessed entry within a closed-in wooden structure. Small ceramic tiles are visible at the foundation level beneath wooden panels.

The west elevation features a series of matched storefronts. Each storefront is made up of a wood triple bay window with a wood door to the south. These doors contain the same 10 light configuration as the Jefferson elevation. A wood staircase and an open-frame wood porch exist toward the rear (extreme south) of this elevation with the same type of multi-paned door giving entry to a second level.

First Church of Christ, Scientist

This building was begun in 1909, and was apparently designed to be completed in stages, according to affordability. The lowest levels are painted brick and contain a cornerstone with the 1909 date. They have wood lattice windows and are visible on the side elevations. There is a one story projecting flanking wing on the east elevation which is part of the older building. In 1924 the original plans for the entire structure were revised and the rest of the building was completed. The overall plan is that of a basilica with its high nave with clerestory and side aisles. The facade is dominated by a monumental projecting pedimented portico with a fine stone entablature resting on four stone Corinthian columns, each carved of one piece of stone. A stone frieze beneath the pediment has the words "First Church of Christ, Scientist" carved into the center block, and there are decorative carved stone blocks at its corners. The side walls of the portico are stuccoed and contain round arched openings. The tripartite facade entry is central. It contains a double-leaf wood panel door, immediately flanked by matching single-leaf wood panel doors. These doors contain amber glass in their upper halves which has been covered by a decorative grill. The doors are flanked by wood fluted pilasters and topped by an embellished entablature. There is a half-circle window above the central door which also is covered with a decorative grill. It has volutes at its edges and a voluted keystone. Flanking this entry are two small fixed wood windows containing amber glass covered by decorative grills which match those of the doors. They feature decorative tiles of pale blue as surrounds. Flanking the portico and placed high on the facade walls are small stone panels containing the date 1924 in Roman numerals. Stone stringcourses are continued from just under the portico's pediment and at the top of the portico's capitals. There is a deep circular window above the portico which is divided by wood muntins into nine lights. The second level aisles feature arched multi-paned windows with lead muntins and amber glass topped by fanlights. The clerestory windows are small four light windows. There is a one story projecting all brick bay with a hipped clay roof on the west elevation and a later concrete block addition at the southwest corner of the rear of the building.

43. HISTORIC SIGNIFICANCE

131 W. Jefferson
First Church of Christ, Scientist

Quite a few members of the First Church of Christ, Scientist in St. Louis lived in St. Louis County. In 1906, twenty county residents decided to organize a First Church of Christ, Scientist in Kirkwood. The first service was held on October 7, 1906 in rented Choral Hall on Bodley Avenue. As membership increased, property was purchased at the northwest corner of Clay and Washington Avenues. The purchase transpired on October 10, 1907, but ground was not broken until July 22, 1909 with cornerstone ceremonies being held on October 11, 1909. Apparently, the construction of the church was planned to take place in stages, according to membership and affordability. By August 14, 1916 all outstanding indebtedness against the first stage of the building had been paid. World War I building restrictions delayed construction on the next stage. After complete revision of plans the building was completed in 1924. The first service was held in the new auditorium on Sunday, December 15, 1924. Total cost of the church, its furnishings and the ground was approximately $90,000. The church was free of all indebtedness when dedication services were held on December 30, 1928.

The prominent features of this small cottage are its facade symmetry, its centered secondary facade gable with returns and its open-frame facade entry porch. The facade gable is particularly emphasized by its contrast with the building's squat hipped roof. The entry porch has a low hipped roof supported by wood posts with stylized capitals, spanned by decorative wood molding which forms a tudor arch. The porch floor is concrete with a wood stair. The facade entry is central and contains a single-leaf wood panel door with a single pane of glass in its upper half. It is topped by a two-light transom and has plain wood surrounds and lintel. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, two over two, with wood surrounds, lintels, sills and shutters. They have wood planter boxes in place beneath the sills. The northeast rear corner of the building has a projecting corner room with a pyramidal roof. This may be an addition to the original building. It has a stone foundation. There is also a small addition at the rear of the building with a shed roof. In addition, the rear elevation has an open-frame entry porch.

This is a small house with a gable-and-wing plan. The original wall covering has been covered by vinyl siding which is similar in scale to what was probably there to begin with. The facade is dominated by its gable and open-frame entry porch. The entry porch has a shed roof which rests on plain wood posts. There is a sparsely spaced turned wood balustrade. The porch floor is wood, and the porch stairs are poured concrete. The facade entry is on an enclosed projection tucked into the intersection of the wing. The entry contains a single-leaf wood panel door with a single pane of glass in its upper half. It is covered by an aluminum storm door. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood molding and sills. The roofline features a slightly projecting plain boxed cornice. There is an enclosed porch/sunroom at the rear of this building.

This is a large home with a front-gable-and-wing plan. Its original wall texture has been covered with composition shingles. It features a dominant front gable with returns, a one story extension to the facade's gabled bay, an oriel window on the west elevation, a gabled dormer also on the west elevation and an open-frame facade veranda. The roof of that one story extension to the facade's gabled bay is hipped. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice. The facade veranda is tucked within the angle formed by the intersection of the wing. It has a flat roof, possibly to accommodate a second level balcony. There is a full length double-hung window with a wood panel at the bottom in place above the facade's entry. The veranda has wood posts which have been covered with composition shingles. They rest on a wood floor with concrete stairs. A solid balustrade is in place. The facade entry is recessed and contains a single-leaf wood door, paneled at the bottom, with two lights at the top with etched glass. It is covered by an aluminum storm door and topped by a two light transom. The facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, two over two, with plain wood molding and wood lugsills. With the exception of the veranda window, they are flanked by working louvered wood shutters. The facade gable window is a wood casement window with one pane of glass. It has wood molding and a wood lugsill. There is a two story frame addition at the northwest corner of the rear of this building. It projects out to the side, and contains a garage with a room above and an attached carport and storage shed.

This is a large home. It is dominated by its complex yet symmetrical roof and open-frame facade veranda. It boasts of fine classical details. It features a mock Palladian window on the facade with a balcony, stain-glass Queen Anne windows on the east elevation, matched pedimented dormers on both side elevations, an oriel/stair window-seat on the east elevation, a oriel window on the west elevation and varied wall texture. The peak of the gambrels have decorative shingles. The veranda's projecting roof is hipped with a central secondary gable. It rests on wood doric columns with a plain wood balustrade. The porch floor and stairs are wood. The facade entry is off-center toward the east and contains a single-leaf wood door with a beveled oval light in its upper half. It is covered by an aluminum storm door and topped by a transom displaying the numerals, 2-3-7. The first level facade window is wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, four over one, with wood surrounds, lintel and lugsill. The framework of the mock Palladian window is wood, but the windows have been replaced with aluminum windows. There is a half-circle louvered ventilaiton opening in the peak of the facade gambre. There is a small new small deck at the rear of this building.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

237 W. Jefferson

A 1909 plat of Kirkwood shows this house to belong to Fred T. Rott. Mr. Rott established Rott Hardware Company which is still in existence today in Kirkwood. He was a civic minded man. In her book, A History of Kirkwood, Missouri, June Dahl mentions F. T. Rott two times in her chapter on civic affairs between 1930 and 1965 - as the president of a reorganized Kirkwood Trust Company in 1934 and the head of the local draft board in 1940. She also lists Mr. Rott as an alderman in 1908-09 in Appendix F.

This is a relatively small dwelling. It features a tri-gable roofline with a plain projecting boxed cornice, a projecting facade bay and an open-frame facade veranda. The veranda's roof is an extension of the building's side gable. It is supported by wood posts which rest on a brick patio. The original porch floor has been removed. There are marks indicating the placement of the floor on the posts and the foundation stones are exposed. The stoop is wood over stone. The entry is slightly off-center and contains a wood single-leaf panel door covered by a wood screen door. It is topped by a transom. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood sills. There is a single story addition at the rear which is irregular in plan with a concrete foundation.

The prominent features of this building are: its high pitched gables; its open-frame wrap-around facade veranda; and its projecting side wing. The veranda has wood posts which rest on a poured concrete slab. The entry is on the west elevation and contains a single-leaf wood panel door covered by an aluminum storm door. The double facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood slipsills and shutters. The west elevation wing is a single story frame room addition. It contains a large fixed single-pane plate-glass window with wood sash and surround. It is flat-topped with wood shutters. This addition has vertical board and batten wood siding on its top 1/2. All elevations are covered with brick under the first level windows. Matching brick stairs with wrought iron railings access the side entry. The remainder of the walls are covered with asbestos shingles. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice. A one story frame addition and an attached wood shed and covered patio exists at the rear of the building.

This is a small house. Its prominent feature is its colonial detailing. It has an off-center entry toward the west which contains a single leaf wood door. The door is covered by an aluminum storm door. Directly to the west of the door and contained within the same framework is a window with a wood shutter on its west side. A plain wood entablature spans the top of the door and window, and the door has molded surrounds. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over six, flat-topped, with wood lugsills. The facade window to the east of the entry is flanked by wood shutters. A cameo-shaped ventilation opening exists in the attic of the facade, and it contains wood louvers. The roofline features exposed rafters and a plain bargeboard in its gable. There is a concrete block addition at the rear of this building which contains a basement level garage with a room above.

The prominent feature of this house is its numerous gables, i.e. the facade gable, the pedimented gable of the facade porch and the garage gable. The facade porch is open-frame with wood posts, balustrade and floor. Its stairs are concrete with a wrought iron railing. The main entry is off-center toward the west and contains a wood single-leaf panel door with three lights in its upper 1/3. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, three over one, with wood surrounds and lintels and wood sills with wood aprons. A breezeway connects what originally was a one story frame garage to the house. The garage door space has been filled in with horizontal wood siding. It contains an entry with a plain single-leaf wood door with a small diamond-shape light. It also contains a metal-frame window which is one over one. Both entrances are covered by aluminum storm doors. The roofline features a slightly projecting plain boxed cornice.

The prominent feature of this building is its orientation. It faces east rather than toward the street. The street elevation features a medium gable and wood windows with wood sash which are double-hung, two over two, flat-topped, with wood surrounds, lintels and lugsills. The east elevation features an open-frame wood porch that probably contained screens at one time. It has a shed roof. The primary entrance is also on the east elevation. It contains a single-leaf wood door. From the foundation up to the gable the building has been covered with rolled fake-brick siding which has been painted white. Horizontal siding exists in the gable. There is a single story frame lean-to addition at the rear of this building which is covered with wood horizontal lap siding and a concrete foundation. The roofline features a projecting plain boxed cornice.

The facade of this building has been extensively altered. There are brick segmental arched windows on the rear elevation which indicate an older building. The recessed entry on the southeast corner contains a metal and glass door which accesses the basement level. The recessed entry on the northeast corner of the facade contains a metal and glass door with a side light and transom. It accesses the first level shop. There are decorative metal bars in place above each facade entry. The three large metal and plate-glass storefront windows are the central feature of the facade.

At one time 109 and 111 were probably considered as separate structures, sharing a wall. Their facades have been blended into one through the use of a stucco finish and a similar window treatment.

109 has a plate-glass and aluminum entry which is off-center toward the north of the store front. To the south of the door are two large plate-glass windows. The doorway is recessed with one of the storefront windows angled toward it. To the north of the doorway is a projecting plate-glass cabinet window.

111 features a double plate-glass entry which is off-center toward the south of the store front. To the south of the entry is a full length plate-glass window. To the north of the double entry doors are two large plate glass windows which are also full length (they are one story in height). The entry is recessed in a manner similar to 109. To the north of this store front is a metal door which serves as the entry to the second floor office spaces.

The second level of 109-111 contains 7 windows which are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over one, with flat tops set within the remnants of segmental arches, with brick sills and wood shutters.

111 features a tripartite parapet. Just below the parapet is a circular vent.

There is a one story masonry addition at the rear of this building.

This building contains two storefronts. The facade has been altered. Both storefronts contain large single glass and metal storefront windows and glass-in-metal single-leaf doors with transoms. The storefronts are flanked and separated by gray vitrolite tiles. Vertical wood siding is in place beneath the storefront windows and vitrolite tiles. A striped canvas awning spans the entire facade. Gray vitrolite tiles mark the attic story over Kirkwood Shoe Repair, and wood board and batten siding marks the attic story over the other storefront. The roofline features flush coping tiles.

The facade of this building has been altered. The recessed entry is off-center toward the north. It contains a glass-in-metal single-leaf door and transom. To the north of the door, within the entry recession, a large plate-glass storefront window is angled diagonally toward the door. The entrance also features a terrazzo floor. To the south of the door, both within the entry recession and adjacent to the sidewalk, are three large plate-glass storefront windows. Vertical wood siding is in place beneath the storefront windows. Gray vitrolate tiles flank storefront windows. A metal cornice is in place above the windows and entry. The attic level is marked with vertical wood siding. The roofline features flush coping tiles.

This facade features a storefront with an off-center entrance. The entry door is single-leaf, wood, with 18 lights. A transom is in place above which now contains a wood panel. A coordinating storefront window exists to the south of the entrance; it is multi-paned with wood mullions. Wood panels are in place below. A galvanized bell-cast hood protects the entry. A one story masonry addition exists at the rear.

The facade of this building contains four storefronts which are divided by brick piers. The storefronts feature recessed entries with single-leaf glass doors and large plate-glass storefront windows. A recessed entry on the north end accesses the second level. It contains a single-leaf glass door. The facade's second level contains seven double window sets which are wood with wood mullions flanked by wood shutters. They appear to be casement windows. False mullions divide the windows into eight lights. The facade has been covered with a brick veneer. A single story masonry addition exists at the rear of the building.

On the first level the facade features a recessed entry toward the north with wood, double-leaf doors whose top halves contain lattice windows. To the south of the entry are two oriel windows topped by wood shake roofs. These oriels feature large plate-glass central windows flanked by 3 smaller lights; these units are wood. Vertical wood siding distinguishes the first level from the second level.

Three fixed window units exist at the facade's second level. All are wood with a deep wood sash, flat-topped, capped by tiles. The two windows above the oriel windows have a three over three light configuration, and the window unit above the entry contains two large panes of glass. A stringcourse of tile serves as sills for these window units as well as the delineation of the first and second levels. Coping tiles cap the parapet, and a crest is displayed at the second level.

The building has been expanded so that a rear addition joins this building with 112 W. Jefferson. Thus, this building shares its side walls with the adjoining buildings, and it also shares the rear and side wall of 100 W. Jefferson (see site plan).

The 112 W. Jefferson facade has been extensively altered. It was a masonry building which is now covered with a stucco finish. An off-center storefront toward the west contains double-leaf wood doors with a single small pane of glass in each. The facade also features three arched openings with flat-top windows consisting of a fixed pane of glass. The two arch/window openings toward the east have been infilled with a masonry substance in the upper 2/3 of the opening; the center arch/window is also covered with fitted wrought iron.

These addresses are all storefronts in a building which features two major facades. It is located at the intersection of Kirkwood Road and Jefferson. The building is unified by its regularly spaced decorative brick panels which are in place beneath a continuous band of 3-course brickwork at the roofline. These features are on both the Kirkwood facade as well as the Jefferson facade.

119 features a central recessed entry which is accessed by means of a concrete ramp, because it is above ground level. The entry contains a wood single-leaf door, with a large single pane of glass; it is topped by a transom which contains a wood panel. The entry is flanked by large plate-glass and metal storefront windows. Wood paneling with decorative molding is in place above and below these windows. (Canvas awnings cover the paneling above the windows.)

121 features a recessed entry which is accessed by means of a concrete ramp, because it is above ground level. The entry contains double-leaf wood doors with large single panes of glass. The storefront windows within the entry recession are angled diagonally toward the doors. Large plate-glass and metal storefront windows flank the entry and are continued onto the Jefferson elevation. Vertical wood siding is in place above the storefront windows displaying the shop's name, "Ribbons and Rhymes Hallmark Shop," as well as the Hallmark emblem.

The Jefferson elevation has evidence of three original window openings. Still visible are the three-course brick segmental arch lintels and the brick-course sills; the window openings have been boarded-up and painted to match the facade brick. The Jefferson elevation also contains a storefront, 100 W. Jefferson. It features a recessed entry accessed by a concrete ramp with a cabinet window to the north. There is evidence of a second doorway within the entry recession; now boarded up. The windows and single-leaf door are glass in metal. The name of the shop is displayed on a projecting sign, "Tres Petite Shoppe/Miniatures & Dolls."

The facade of this building contains one storefront. It features a central recessed entry with a glass-in-metal single-leaf door with sidelights and transom and a terrazzo floor. The entry is flanked by large glass and metal storefront windows which are angled diagonally toward the door. Durastone is in place below the windows. Vertical wood siding spans the facade above the entry and windows, and it displays the words "The Idea Shop: where creative ideas come alive." The attic level features recessed brick panels with cut white stone decorative elements. The roofline features a parapet which is crowned by volutes and shpere of white stone. The rear elevation contains soldier-course brick-work which indicates an earlier date for this building than does its facade.

The prominent features of this bungalow include its salt box roof, its veranda and its eastward orientation. The building faces its mate (237 E. Madison) rather than the street, and the entry is on the east elevation. This elevation features an open-frame veranda whose roof is a continuation of the main roof supported by simple wood posts. All windows on the street elevation are wood with wood sash, double-hung, three over one, flat-topped, with wood sills. The roofline features a plain boxed cornice.

The prominent feature of this bungalow is its salt box roof. The orientation of this building has been changed. The main entrance was originally on the west elevation rather than on the street elevation. Thus, this building faced another bungalow that matched it in design and plan (see 235 E. Madison). The main entry is currently on the street elevation in what is now a room addition; originally this was a veranda with a roof that was a continuation of the main roof. This addition has been sided with wood horizontal lap-siding. The remainder of the building is covered with asbestos fishscale shingles. The windows on the street elevation are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over six, flat-topped, with wood sills; aluminum awnings are in place. The roofline features a plain boxed cornice.

The prominent features of this building include: an accentuated centered facade entry with a decorative pediment supported by fluted pilasters; symmetrically balanced double-hung sash windows with multi-paned glazing; and brick dentiling beneath the roofline. The facade entry contains a single-leaf wood panel door covered by an aluminum storm door. The facade windows are wood, eight over eight, with molded wood surrounds, wood shutters and brick soldier-course sills. Metal storm drains vertically divide the facade into thirds. There is a one story frame addition on the east elevation.

Picturesque features of this building include its steeply pitched applied facade gable and a central facade exterior chimney. Another prominent feature is its steeply gabled enclosed projecting facade entry. This entry is off-center toward the east. It contains a round-arched wood door with a circular multi-paned light in its upper 1/3, and it is covered by a wood screen door. The entry is framed by irregular stone voussoirs which have been painted. To the west of the door on the entry projection is a small wood casement window containing four lights. It is flat-topped, with a brick soldier-course sill and a single course of vertical bricks forming the lintel. It has plain wood molding. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, with plain wood molding, six over six, with brick soldier-course sills and a single course of vertical bricks for the lintels. A one story brick garage is attached to the southeast corner of this building.

This is a large home. Its prominent features include: a complex roofline with its hipped roof, its gable atop a bracketed projecting second and attic story bay, and its bayed gabled dormer; its deeply projecting boxed cornice; its facade porch; and its varied siding materials. The facade entrance is recessed and off-center and contains a single-leaf wood door with a single light. The open-frame projecting facade porch has a gabled roof and wood posts. The first level facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, two over two, with flat wood lintels and wood sills and shutters. The stair/hall window is fixed, contains one large light and is topped by a transom. The second level facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over two, flat-topped, with wood lintels and sills. A wood panel is in place above the window on the projecting second story bay. Above this is a small wood gable window which features a round arch. It is one over one with arched wood molding and sill. The facade dormer contains a double casement window which is wood with wood mullion, three over three, flat-topped, with wood sill. All windows are covered by aluminum storm sash. The first level has wood horizontal lap-siding, and the second level is covered with wooden shakes. There is a new one story enclosed porch and frame garage at the rear of the building.

This house matches 108 N. Taylor in its plan and design.

The prominent features of this building are its classical details and symmetry. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over one, with flat brick lintels and brick course sills. The central entry on the first level contains a wood single-leaf panel door flanked by side lights. At the second level there is a central multi-paned wood french door which opens onto an iron balcony. A two story projecting portico with wood columns with doric capitals call attention to these two doorways. Wood shutters flank the facade's windows and second level door. Soldier-course brick-work which has been painted black separates the watertable from the first floor.

116 N. Taylor

The first story facade features an open-frame, wrap-around veranda, with turned wooden posts and spindle work; plain lower balustrades replace the original. There are 3 single-leaf facade doors, one is recessed (SW corner). Each door is wood, contains 15 lights, and is topped by a transom. There is a two story addition on the NW corner (with concrete foundation). The facade of this addition contains a triple window with wood mullions at the second level and squatter proportions than the remainder of the facade windows. All first and second story windows are wood, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped with wood slipsills. Wood shutters exist on the first and second story windows. The facade also features a decorative triple window in the gable above the second story windows; of wood, with wood mullions, multi-paned, casement. All facade windows are covered by aluminum storm sash. There are also aluminum storm doors. The roofline features a plain boxed cornice. There is a two story frame addition with a concrete foundation at the SE corner of the rear of the building; as well as a one story frame addition with a concrete foundation at the NE corner of the rear of the building.

This building originally matched 124 N. Taylor in its plan and design.

The facade features an open frame veranda at the first level; the original wood floor has been replaced by a poured concrete slab. This was probably originally a wrap-around veranda; evidenced by the elevated wood door on the south projecting side bay and the unfinished edge of the south end of the existing veranda. The veranda has turned posts, a low hipped roof and marks where the original upper and lower balustrades have been removed. The facade's main entry has a wood, single-leaf, six-panel door topped by a transom featuring art glass and decorative wood molding. The facade windows at the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood slipsills. The facade also features a picturesque triple window in the gable above the second story windows; of wood, with wood mullions, casement (matches window of 116 N. Taylor). Above this window is a decorative half-round wood panel containing a sun-rise motif. The NW corner of the facade sports a square turret with a high hipped roof; presently, a metal weather vane exists at the top of this turret. The continuous bands of varied styles of wood siding material is another prominent feature of the facade; to include, vertical tongue and groove, fish scale and horizontal lap siding. A continuous decorative wood frieze of circle and square motifs is in place at the top of the second story windows. The roofline features a plain boxed cornice.

This building originally matched 116 N. Taylor in plan and design.

Outbuilding

A 1 1/2 story frame outbuilding fronts on E. Jefferson. It has a stone foundation which has been faced with concrete and a medium gable roof with projecting eaves and exposed rafters. This building features the same varied siding patterns as those used on the house; but much of the material is vinyl rather than wood. It also sports a large round turret with a conical roof of wood shakes on the SW corner. A new 6 panel door and 2 new garage doors have been installed. The facade also features the same half-round wood panel with the sun-rise motif and the frieze of circle and square motifs as seen on the house. The windows are new, single, replacement windows.

This is a large house. It is a two family dwelling evidenced by the double facade entries. Its prominent features include: a complex roofline with its pedimented wall dormers and shed roof dormer which intersect with a truncated hip roof; its two storied cut-away window bay; a cut-away window bay on the south elevation; its varied wall textures; and its open-frame wrap-around facade veranda. The veranda's projecting roof rests on turned wood posts. Featured are a beaded upper frieze, eastlake spandrels and a plain wood balustrade. The veranda floor is wood with concrete foundation and stairs. Wrought iron railings are in place on the stairs. The facade entries are off-center toward the north. Both contain single-leaf wood doors which have six lights in the upper half. They are covered by wood storm doors. All facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one lights, with plain wood molding and wood lugsills. The facade gable window is also wood with wood sash, flat-topped, one over one lights with the upper light featuring a rounded arch, with wood surrounds, sill and lintel. The pedimented wall dormers are surfaced with imbricated wood shingles. There is a plain frieze in place beneath the cornice on these dormers. There is a one story frame addition at the rear of this building with a concrete foundation. It is topped by a plain wood balustrade. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice. This building matches 211 N. Taylor in its original basic plan and design.

This is a large house. Its prominent features include: a complex roofline with its pedimented wall dormers and pedimented roof dormer which intersect with a truncated hip roof; its two storied cut-away window bay; its projecting bay on the south elevation; and its partially screened-in wrap-around facade veranda. This home was apparently given a uniform stucco wall texture at a later date. There is evidence of original imbricated wood shingles in the gable of the north elevation's roof dormer. The projecting facade veranda's roof rests on stuccoed posts, and a filled-in balustrade also has a stuccoed finish. The wrap-around part on the south elevation is screened-in with wood-framed screens. The porch floor is wood and the porch stairs are concrete. The facade entry is off-center toward the north and contains a single-leaf wood panel door covered by an aluminum storm door and topped by a transom. Immediately to its south is a large single-paned window contained within wood paneling. To the north of the door is a stain-glass wood casement window with a wood lugsill and plain wood molding. The remainder of the facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one lights, with plain wood molding and lugsills. The facade gable window is a wood casement window with plain wood molding and lugsill. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice. There is a one story frame addition at the rear of the building which has a hipped roof. This addition is also finished with a stuccoed texture. This building originally matched 201 N. Taylor in its design and plan.

This building features a shed dormer on the facade and a 1 1/2 story projecting facade bay with a bellcast gabled roof. It also features fine brickwork. This brickwork includes a beltcourse at the watertable of soldier-course bricks, soldier-course brick window sills on the first level of the facade, a splayed course of bricks that arch the facade entry, the decorative brickwork on the stepped edge of the brick entrance arch and brick entry stoop and stairs. The facade contains two entries to accomodate this two-family dwelling. One entry is on the south wall of the facade projection and the other entry faces the street. Both contain single-leaf wood doors with nine lights in their upper halves covered by an aluminum storm door. The facade first level windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood molding. There is a small attic level window on the facade within the bellcast gable. It is a wood casement window with three lights placed vertically. It is a flat-topped window within a rounded brick arch, and it has a brick soldier-course sill. The shed dormer contains replacement jalousie windows with aluminum frames. Aluminum awnings are in place above the facade windows. The roofline features a projecting plain boxed cornice with a plain wood frieze beneath.

This building is reminiscent of an English country house. Its prominent features include: its 2 1/2 story projecting gabled facade bay; its irregularly placed multi-paned windows; and its massive facade chimney. Other features include: a bay window on the south elevation; a facade shed dormer; a screened-in porch on the first level at the rear with a sunroom above it; and a one story office addition to the north elevation. The facade contains two entries, the main one being off-center toward the south. This entry has a projecting gabled porch roof which is steeply pitched and supported by wood posts which extend to a stuccoed porch railing. A curvilinear frieze is in place beneath the porch gable. The porch floor and stairs are poured concrete. The secondary facade entry is just north of the projecting facade bay and has a poured concrete stoop and stairs. Both entries have wrought iron stair railings and single-leaf wood panel doors with six small lights at the top of the door. All facade windows are wood casement windows with plain large wood aprons beneath wood lugsills. Several of them have transoms. There is a charming triple set of leaded lattice windows beneath the roofline cornice contained within a cut-out in the chimney. These project forming a window seat, and the set is bracketed on its north end. The roofline has plain projecting verges with plain bargeboards in the gables.

The prominent features of this building include: its double facade gables with their applied stucco and half-timber finish and wood corner elbow brackets; its facade entry porch; and its one story projecting facade bay which contains a sunroom. The roofline features a slightly projecting plain boxed cornice. The main facade entry is recessed and off-center toward the north. There is also an entry on the north wall of the sunroom. Both entries contain single-leaf wood doors and are flanked by sidelights. The main door contains multi-lights, and the sunroom door contains three small lights at the top. The facade porch has a concrete floor and stairs and a brick post. It is topped by a wood jig-saw balustrade. The sunroom facade windows are in a band of four. They are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, six over one lights, with brick soldier-course sills and wood molding and mullions. The facade gables contain triangular louvered ventilation openings at their peaks.

This house is dominated by its roof which features a front-facing gambrel with large gambrel side dormers flanked by small pedimented dormers. Natural wood shingles within the gambrels and on the dormer walls further emphasize the roof. Other prominent features include: lattice windows; oriel on the north and south elevations; a window bay on the south elevation; a second level sleeping porch on the rear elevation; and open-frame porches on the facade and rear elevations. The facade porch roof is hipped supported by two wood tuscan columns which extend to an enclosed railing. The porch floor is wood, and there are poured concrete stairs. There are two facade entries. One is off-center toward the north. The other is on the south wall of the enclosed porch room. Both entries contain single-leaf wood doors with decorative molding and a single pane of glass in the upper half. Both doors are topped by transoms and wood entablatures and have wood surrounds. The triple porch windows to the south of the entrance are wood casement lattice windows with wood entablature, sill, surrounds and mullions. The facade window on the enclosed porch room is wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, eight over one lights, with wood entablature, lugsill, surrounds and shutters. The facade gambrel contains a triple window unit which is obscured by copper filament screens. They have wood entablature, surrounds, lugsill and shutters. The roofline on the side elevations features a plain projecting boxed cornice, and the roofline does not project on the gambrel ends.

This house is dominated by its steeply pitched facade gable with its flared bargeboard and bracketed apex shelf. Other prominent features include; a gabled dormer on the north elevation; small bayed lattice windows also on the north elevation; multi-paned fenestration; a bracketed jettied second story; and an enclosed screened-in facade porch. The facade porch is contained within the confines of the jettied second story. Its central screened opening is slightly arched. The others are flat-topped. The screens have wood frames. The entry to this porch is on its south side. The facade entry is off-center toward the north containing a single-leaf wood door with eight small lights at the top. To the south of this entry is a triple wood window unit with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, twenty over one lights, with wood entablature, surrounds, mullions and sill. The porch floor is concrete over concrete block. There is a one story frame addition to the south elevation with a side-facing gable and a bracketed oriel on its facade. The center window of this oriel is a wood fixed window containing twenty lights, and it is flanked by wood sash windows with four over four lights. The triple facade gable windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, twenty over one lights, with wood surrounds, lugsill, lintel and mullions. There is a rectangular louvered ventilation opening near the peak of the facade gable.

This picturesque building is dominated by its steeply pitched gables. It features stucco and half timbering, a massive stone chimney and bands of multi-paned windows. In addition there are; projecting bays; a facade bay window; tudor-arched doors and windows; triangular, cornered and shed dormers; stone accents such as a stone stringcourse at the watertable and stone voussoirs around the now filled-in original main entry and the large window grouping to its north; and attached stone buttresses. All of the original facade windows are wood casement windows, flat-topped, multi-paned and set in bands. There are graduated transoms in place above the tudor arched window grouping to the north of the original entry. The original facade entry has been filled in with a stone planter box and a band of aluminum sash windows which are double-hung with flat tops. Its tudor arch has been filled in with a wood panel. A new buff colored brick wing has been added to the south elevation in recent history.

The prominent features of this building include its wide low gables and its Colonial detailing. The facade entry is recessed toward the south and contains a single-leaf wood cross-buck door with nine lights in its top half. It has plain wood surrounds and entablature and is covered by an aluminum storm door. A concrete curvilinear stoop accesses this entrance, and stylized corner pilasters lend a classical finish. North of the facade entry is a window bay containing three wood windows with wood sash. They are double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood sills and plain wood molding. This window bay and the facade entry are topped by a plain wood frieze. A shallow hipped roof is in place above the window bay. The second story of the facade contains a triple window unit with wood windows, double-hung, with multi diamond-shape lights over one, with a single wood lugsill and shaped wood lintel with a slightly projecting lintel cornice. All of the facade windows are flanked by wood shutters. There is a small louvered diamond-shape ventilation opening contained within the facade gable. The gable roofline feature a plain wood bargeboard which flanges out at the ends. It is echoed by a wood frieze beneath. There is a second window bay on the south elevation of this building.

The prominent features of this building include: its symmetrical facade; its low side gables with a secondary centered wall gable on the facade; its open-frame facade veranda with jig-saw spandrels; and its uniform wall texture. The facade veranda has a hipped roof which is pierced by a central gable with returns. Its roof rests on stylized wood posts which extend to an incised concrete slab. (A wood porch floor has probably been removed.) The facade entry is central and contains a single-leaf raised-panel wood door with a single pane of glass in its upper half. It is topped by a transom and covered by an aluminum storm door. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, two over two, with wood lugsills and plain wood surrounds and lintels. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice with a plain frieze. There is a two story frame addition at the rear of this building with a gabled roof. There is also a large wood deck. This building matched 410 N. Taylor in its original basic design and plan.

The prominent features of this building include: steeply pitched dominant facade gables which are pedimented and have boxed-in peaks; overhanging second story bays on the facade and south elevations; a cut-away bay window on the south elevation; and a gabled dormer also on the south elevation. There is a one story frame addition on the north elevation which is visible on the facade. The main entry is contained within the facade of this addition. It contains a single-leaf paneled wood door with two small lights at the top and is covered by an aluminum storm door. A brick stoop and stairs access this entry. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped and multi-paned. The windows on the first and second stories of the older facade have an eight over twelve light configuration, plain wood molding and sills and wood shutters. New storm sash breaks in a different place than the original windows. The windows on the facade of the addition are triple with wood mullions, surrounds, lintel and sill. There is a small rectangular louvered ventilation opening in the gable of the overhanging facade bay. The facade gable contains a wood casement window which is multi-paned with wood molding and wood sills. The overhanging second story facade bay is supported by small regularly spaced wood brackets. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice.

This is a large home. Its prominent features include: its vertically and horizontally symmetrical facade in spite of its asymmetrical gable-and-wing plan; its shallow gables with returns; and its nice application of Colonial detailing. The facade entry is central, recessed on the projecting south elevation bay and contains a single-leaf wood panel door flanked by multi-paned (five vertical) sidelights. The door is covered with a wood storm door. It is topped by a slightly projecting entablature-hood which rests on plain wood posts. The stoop is concrete. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over six, flat-topped, with plain wood molding, sills and shutters. The exception is the stair window above the entry which is a wood casement window, with ten lights, topped by a blind rounded-arch. There is a one story open-frame screened in veranda on the south elevation which is visible on the facade. It has wood posts and balustrade. The roofline features a greatly projecting plain boxed cornice. There is a two story frame addition at the rear of this building that has a concrete foundation and a shed roof.

43 History and Significance Built in the 1860's by C. Kyle, the house became the home of Mrs. William T. Essex and her husband after she inherited it from her sister, Miss Miriam G. Bodley in 1886. The property was purchased by Mr. Anton Lindahl, City Forester of Kirkwood, when Mrs. Essex died in 1911. It remained unchanged until it was secured by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Gamble in 1934 from Lloyd Bryan Ringo, husband of Virginia Conway Ringo, whose mother had been the previous owner. They made extensive improvements. Mr. Gamble put ten ton jacks				428 N. Taylor
44 Description of Environment and Outbuildings The house sits close to the south side and east back property lines. A white picket fence runs along the south property line separating a rose garden from the street. The west front and north side yards are expansive wooded lawns. There is a little goldfish pool on the north side.				Photo ventilation. A one-story screened porch with a hip roof supported by Doric columns has been added to the front half of the north side.

The north side has two bays in the front gable and then three bays are recessed into the angle of the L. The angle of the L is filled in by an attractive brick patio.

On the south side there is a large rectangular, 1-story bay window with a hip roof under the front main gable. The gable contains 1 bay above the bay window. From the main gable the roof line telescopes into three progressively smaller sections to the back. There are two bays close together in a cross-gable section coming off of the main roof. Then there are two smaller bays, farther apart, in a section with a lower gable roof. This long leg of the L is only 1 bay across at the back. A one-story, two-car garage, facing south, has been added on the back.

ing to the east with its gable facing east. The eaves are supported by simple carved brackets. A one-story porch with a hip roof supported by square posts, which are connected to each other by simple curved braces, spans the front of the house and wraps around one bay on the west side of the house. On the west end of the front, the porch is indented under the second story in the section that contains two bays under a gable. The front door and French doors are on the first floor of this section. The second story is supported by an inner row of square posts in this section of the house.

On the west side, the south, front section has one window on the first floor and none on the second floor. An addition with a lower roof line (a gentle hip) extends to the north for seven bays. This addition has French doors with large windows on either side (double-hung, eight over eight), then a large, double kitchen window (double-hung, four over four) and then two old windows (double-hung, six over six). At the north a gable faces east and west over the last two windows. There are two brackets under the eaves on this part of the house.

The back of the house has 2 bays, a door on the first floor and a window on the second floor. A brick chimney runs up the wall between them. East of this section, on the back is a one story, two car garage made of cement blocks with a shed roof.

The east side is an irregular L. A gable on the north contains 2 bays, then there is one bay, then a projection filling in the angle of the L. It is one bay deep and on its east side has a triple window on the second floor and a door on the first. The projection that has its gable facing east comes out 4 bays deep and 3 bays across its second floor. A one story board and batten addition with a shed roof has been added to this eastern projection. It has French doors in the center surrounded by a pillastered pediment and large windows (double hung, 12 over 12) on either side.

the Secretary of the Pacific Railroad, bought 53 of these acres and built a house around the cabin. A cellar was dug beginning 13 feet to the south and a stone foundation was laid to the same height as that of the cabin. Starting at the cabin wall, 40 foot, hand hewn oak beams were laid running south. Most of the house still rests on these. The cabin was enclosed and given a second story.

Mt. Mitchell's first wife was Judith Bodley, the daughter of Harry I. Bodley, and after her death he married Mary Brent. In 1856, Abram Mitchell sold the property to the trustees of his wife, Mary Brent Mitchell. Mitchell was a vestryman of Grace Episcopal Church from 1859 until 1861 when he left the state, possibly due to the war. In 1860, he had sold the property, including the house, to William T. Essex. Essex was living across the street on N.

Taylor and was married to Effie Bodley, another daughter of Harry I. Bodley.

In 1870, William Essex built "Ivy Lodge", just north of the Mitchell house. In 1874, Essex sold this house and four acres to Elizah Moore, who immediately conveyed it to Emma Brent. The Brents lived in the house until 1893. The house then deteriorated until it was sold to Laura Bodley Gratz, in 1910. Laura was another daughter of Harry I. Bodley. She and her husband, Anderson Gratz lived at "Homewood", the Bodley Estate on Bodley Lane behind this house. Mrs. Gratz bought the property to rid the neighborhood of an eyesore. The neighbors referred to the house as the "chicken coop". Mrs. Gratz, and after her death in 1912, the Trust of Katherine Essex Gratz, rented the house to Charles and Helen Brown.

The Browns planned and executed many structural and cosmetic changes in the 1930's, under the direction of Beverly Nelson, a noted St. Louis architect. He designed a Southern colonial porch across the front of the house, said to be styled after one on a Virginia mansion that burned during the Civil War. A large, handsome library was added east of the parlor. Peter Seltzer, Kirkwood's famous landscape architect, designed a formal garden with brick walls, wrought iron gates and a fountain.

The prominent features of this building include: its squat front gable; its bracketed projecting facade cornice; its overhanging side eaves with exposed rafters; its Tudor facade door; its open-frame facade porch with its classic porch pediment which rests on classic wood tuscan columns. There is evidence of wood posts (still attached at facade corners) that were probably part of a veranda that spanned the entire facade. The columns of the current porch rest on a concrete slab which spans the entire facade. The facade entry is slightly off-center toward the south. It contains a single-leaf wood panel door with 12 lights in its upper 1/2. It is a Tudor arched door, and its surrounds and lintel are wood. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood lugsills. They are covered by aluminum storm sash.

The prominent features of this building include: its high front gable with modified returns; a small triangular dormer which cuts into the roofline on the north elevation; a one story projecting bay on the south elevation; and its open-frame facade veranda. The facade entry is off-center toward the south. It contains a single-leaf wood panel door with a single pane of glass in the upper 1/2. The entry is covered by a wood screen door. The facade veranda has a shed roof which rests on wood posts, with a wood floor and concrete stairs. There are plain wood balustrades in place on the veranda and wrought iron railings on the stairs. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood surrounds, sills and lintels. The second level facade windows also feature wood shutters. There is a rectangular louvered ventilation opening visible within the facade gable. The roofline features a plain slightly projecting boxed cornice.

The original house was a two story I-house. The facade of the original building contains an off-center entry with a single-leaf wood door with a diamond shaped light near the top. It is covered by an aluminum storm door and has wood surrounds and lintel. A corrugated fiberglass hood is supported by metal tube brackets. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, six over six, with wood sills and simple wood molding. With the exception of the window immediately to the south of the entry, the facade windows are flanked by wood louvered shutters. The facade roofline does not project. The rooflines on the gable ends projects slightly. There is a one room frame addition on the north elevation which is visible from the street. There is also a one story frame addition at the rear which is topped by a cedar deck.

The prominent features of this building include: its assymetrical and extended plan; its complex roofline; its twin gabled facade dormers; a two story cut away bay on the southeast corner of the building; its dominant projecting gabled facade bay; and its curvilinear facade veranda. The veranda has been screened-in. A turned wood balustrade is visible behind the lower screens. The curvilinear veranda roof is supported by wood columns. The facade entry contains a single-leaf wood door with leaded glass. It is flanked by sidelights. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood sills and plain wood molding. A visual examination of this building does not clearly indicate where the original building stops and the additions begin. A two story addition on the west elevation has a hipped roof.

43. HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE

135 E. Washington

Alexander C. Orrick purchased land from Isaac S. Warren and built this house in the 1880s.

A group of women from the Meacham Park area founded an organization to help needy persons living in the vicinity. In 1900 they called themselves the Willing Workers' Aid Society. When in 1905 they discovered that there were no institutions in St. Louis County for the care of the aged, they opened a bank account into which they placed whatever amount of money they could spare for the founding of an old folks' home. Homes of this sort in St. Louis were not open to county residents. At first a house on East Monroe Avenue, belonging to the DeHoog family was rented for $18 a month. It was known as the Willing Workers' Home for the Aged. The name was changed to the Old Folks' Home when it was incorporated on July 8, 1907. The DeHoog property quickly became too small. The Old Folks' Home occupied several other houses between 1907 and 1910, when the Orrick property was purchased. The home was seriously damaged by fire on May 7, 1917. The insurance held on the building was inadequate; but thanks to a public appeal for funds, the home was repaired and a wing added. The Old Folks' Home moved to a new building in October of 1927.

The general appearance of this building has been changed due to two one story frame additions which flank the projecting facade bay. The addition to the east of the facade has a hipped roof with overhanging eaves and exposed jigsaw rafters. It is a screened-in porch with a wood screen door, wood framed screens and poured concrete floor. The screened window opening on the facade of this porch features a low segmental arch. The main entry is contained within this screened-in porch. It is on the south elevation of the projecting east wing, and it contains a single-leaf wood door with three long panes of glass with a 1/4-1 1/2-1/4 ratio. The one story frame addition to the west of the projecting facade bay is a room addition. It has a flat roof with short posts connected by link chain - affecting a balustrade. The facade window of this addition is wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood surrounds and lintel and a wood plant box in the place of a sill. It is flanked by wood shutters. The facade windows on the projecting bay are double units. They are wood with wood sash, double-hung, one over one, flat-topped, with wood mullions, plain wood molding and lugsills. They are flanked by wood shutters. The windows of the projecting side wings are wood with wood sash, double-hung, two over two, flat-topped, with wood surrounds, lintels, lugsills and shutters. The small window in the facade gable appears to be fixed. It is diamond shaped with deep wood molding. The roofline features a plain projecting boxed cornice with a plain wood frieze.

This picturesque house is dominated by its projecting enclosed entrance. This projection is centered on the facade and features a stucco and half timber finish and a gable with its east leg extended. The entry is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf wood door which has been covered by an aluminum storm door. A poured concrete stoop with wrought iron railing accesses this entry. Also on this entry projection are two small stepped windows. These are wood casement windows, with lugsills and flat tops. The lower window contains six lights, and the upper window contains nine lights. Other prominent features of this house include; its twin gabled facade dormers; its shed dormer on the east elevation; and its exterior stepped chimney. The facade windows on the first level are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, with wood lugsills and surrounds. The single window to the east of the projecting entry contains eight over eight lights, and the double window to the west of the entry contains six over six lights with wood mullions. The facade dormer windows are wood casement windows with nine lights. All windows are covered by aluminum storm sash.

This small home is dominated by its projecting facade entry porch with its proportionally large gable. Its roof is supported by narrow wood posts which extend to a filled-in balustrade. Decorative spandrels are in place. The porch has a poured concrete floor and stairs. Other prominent features of this home include: its projecting bay on its east elevation; its deeply overhanging eaves; and its small gabled facade dormer containing a louvered ventilation opening. The facade entry is centered and contains a single-leaf wood door with multi-lights. It is covered by an aluminum storm door. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, with wood surrounds, mullions and sills. The triple set to the east of the entry are four over four with wood shutters, and the double set to the west of the entry are six over six. The windows are covered by aluminum storm sash. There is a screened-in porch at the rear of this building.

This small home is dominated by its open-frame porches, its twin gabled facade dormers and its exterior side chimney. The facade is symmetrical and features a projecting entry porch with a gabled roof which is supported by narrow wood posts. The porch floor and stairs are concrete. The porch contains a single-leaf wood panel door covered by an aluminum storm door and flanked by fluted pilasters. A large wood entablature tops this. The projecting porch extending from the east elevation also features a gabled roof supported by narrow wood posts on a concrete slab with a plain wood balustrade. In addition it contains two entries which flank the chimney. These are single-leaf wood doors with multi-lights covered by aluminum storm doors. Both porches feature flattened arches. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, six over six, with wood sills, surrounds and lintels. On the first level they are double with wood mullions. The roofline does not project. There is a one story frame addition at the rear with a southwardly facing gable.

This is a large home. Its prominent features include: its steeply pitched front gable with its deeply overhanging eaves; its projecting porches, i.e. a one story projecting screened-in porch topped by a wrought iron balustrade on the west elevation and a two story porch wing on the east elevation. Both porch projections are visible on the facade. The roof of the two story porch wing is hipped. Its first level is a sunroom, and its second level is a screened-in sleeping porch. The entry is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf flush wood door which has been covered by an aluminum storm door. It is topped by a fixed transom containing a band of five lights. Concrete stairs and stoop access this entry. The facade windows on the first level of the main building are wood with wood sash, double-hung, six over six, flat-topped with simple wood molding, brick soldier-course sills and wood shutters. The second level facade windows of the main building are wood with wood sash, double-hung, eight over eight, flat-topped with simple wood molding and wood lugsills. The facade gable window is a double casement window without mullion. It is wood, flat-topped with plain wood molding, and each leaf contains six small lights at the top and a single large light beneath. The sunroom on the first level of the east projecting wing contains fixed glass-in-wood windows with eight lights. These are double windows without mullions. The sleeping porch on the second level of this wing has wood screens. The first floor has been distinguished from the second and attic floors because it is brick while the above floors are covered with wood shingles. The owners have reduced this effect by painting all the wall surfaces a uniform olive green. Other features which articulate the various floors and lend a horizontal emphasis are a slight jettying of the second level and a wide plain wood frieze on the facade between the second and attic levels. There is a 1 1/2 story attached brick garage at the rear of this building which has been painted an olive green to match the rest of the home. The roofline features a plain boxed cornice.

The prominent features of this house include: its two story box-like plan to which a boxy two story wing has been added; its flattened-down pyramidal hipped roof with deeply overhanging eaves; and its entry with its overhanging hood/balcony. The facade entry is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf wood panel door with three lights in its upper 1/3. It is covered by an aluminum storm door and flanked by decorative wood panels. This entry has probably been altered. Concrete stoop and stairs with wrought iron railing access the entry. A bracketed hipped hood is in place over the entry which also features a decorative wrought railing. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, three over one, with wood surrounds, lintels and sills. These are double window units.

This picturesque house is dominated by its projecting enclosed entrance. This projection is centered on the facade and features a stucco and half timber finish and a gable with its east leg extended. The entry is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf plain wood door which has been covered by a wood storm door. A brick and concrete stoop access this entry. Also on this entry projection are two small stepped windows. These are wood casement windows, with wood lugsills and flat tops. One window contains six lights, and the other window contains nine lights. Other prominent features of this house include its projecting bay on the east elevation and its small twin hipped dormers on the facade. The facade windows on the first level are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, four over six, with wood surrounds and sills. There is a double window unit to the east of the entrance and a triple unit to the west of the entrance. Both units have wood mullions and are covered by aluminum storm sash. The facade dormer windows are wood casement windows with flat tops and nine lights. They are covered by a single pane of glass serving as a storm window. The roofline on the facade is projecting featuring a plain boxed cornice with corner brackets. On the side elevations the roofline does not project.

This is a relatively large home. It is dominated by double facade gables and deeply overhanging eaves - that of the house itself and that of the screened in porch. They have plain projecting verges with plain bargeboards which are flared at the ends. Prominent wood elbow brackets are in place. The house also features exposed and decoratively extended rafter ends, a gabled dormer with flared walls on the west elevation and an oriel window also on the west elevation. The facade veranda has wood-framed screens, wood posts with stylized capitals and a filled-in and stuccoed balustrade. The veranda floor and stairs are poured concrete. Iron railings are in place on the stairs. The facade entry is off-center toward the west and contains a single-leaf wood door covered by a wood screen door. It has plain wood molding. There is a double window to the east of the entry on the first level. All facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, four over one, with wood sills and simple wood molding. The double window in the gable as well as the double window on the first floor of the facade have wood mullions.

This is a large home. Its prominent features include: its complex roofline with a dominant facade gable; its asymmetrical facade; and its avoidance of a smooth-walled appearance. It features a two story cut-away projecting bay on the facade, a two story gabled projecting bay on the west elevation, a shed dormer also on the west elevation, a one story projecting screened-in veranda on the east elevation, a two story window bay also on its east elevation, two screened-in porches on the southwest corner of the rear elevation and a facade entry porch topped by a balcony. The facade entry porch has a flat roof with a geometric wood balustrade supported by wood tuscan columns. The facade entry contains a single-leaf six-panel wood door covered by an aluminum storm door. It is topped by a leaded glass transom and flanked by leaded glass sidelights which also have small leaded glass transoms. The porch floor is wood as are the porch stairs. Wrought iron stair railings are in place. The facade windows on the first and second levels are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, one over one, with wood entablatures, lugsills and surrounds. The facade gable window is a single-leaf wood casement window with six lights. It has a wood entablature, surrounds and lugsill. The first story facade windows and the facade window above the entry are covered by aluminum storm sash. The facade windows on the second level of the projecting bay have wood screens.

narrow, arched window is in the gable above and behind the bay window. Formerly a one-story porch with a shed roof ran the length of the east side behind the bay window. It has been enclosed with stucco for two bays and screened in for the north two bays.

The back was originally three bays under a gable. Now there is a two story addition with a shed roof projecting from the western two-thirds of the back. It has a sun porch on the second story.

The west side is similar to the east side (it contains five bays), except that there is not a bay window and there is no porch.

black children of Kirkwood.

The Pitzman Atlas of 1878 shows this lot belonging to Howard DeFrance Evans. Howard was the wife of Dr. James Walker Evans. Dr. Evans was a family physician who became so upset each time that one of his patients died that he finally gave up medicine to sell insurance.

One of the Evans's daughters, Kate Hernden Evans, who had been born in this house, married Howard W. Crosby and they raised their family in this house. The Crosbys put the stucco on the outside of this house in 1924.

The present owner, Mr. Buel Crosby, is the third generation to own this house.

This building has been covered over and added onto so much that there is little evidence of the original building. There are patches of wide wood horizontal lap siding on the side elevations. (The owner is in the process of putting on the natural wood siding.) The entablature of the original facade porch roof is still in place, and there are exposed rafter ends in the overhanging eaves of the side elevations. The facade is dominated by its gable and projecting porch. The gable has plain projecting verges with plain bargeboards. The facade porch has a hipped roof which rests on rough wood posts with a new modern balustrade. The porch is now bi-level. A wood floor and stairs access a second level wood platform at the facade entry which is off-center toward the west. It contains a single-leaf wood multi-paned door covered by an aluminum storm door. There is a long shed wall dormer on the west elevation as well as one on the east elevation. It still has the wood lap siding as well as exposed rafter ends hinting of the original building. There is a projecting one story corner addition at the southeast corner at the rear of this building and a large cedar deck at the rear. The facade windows have been replaced with aluminum windows. The windows on the side elevations are the older wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, multi-lights over a single light.

This rustic residence was at one time a small stone church. It has an eastern orientation rather than toward the street. The first floor is constructed of shale, while the attic level is covered with wood lap siding and board and batten. The prominent features of this building include: its facade gable with an extended east leg; a long shed dormer on the east elevation; a massive stone chimney at the rear of the original building; and the screened-in porch which has been included under the extension of the gable. The facade entry to the screened-in porch is covered by a gabled hood with an extended west leg. This entry is accessed by shale stone stairs. The main entry is recessed on the east wall and contains a single-leaf wood door with multi-lights which is covered by an aluminum storm door. The facade windows are wood with wood sash, double-hung, flat-topped, eight over eight. On the second level they have wood surrounds, lintel and lugsill. The windows on the first level have projecting shale sills, and there is no visible molding. Wood plant boxes set on these sills. There is a one story log addition at the rear with a low gabled roof.

43. HISTORIC SIGNIFICANCE

330 W. Washington

In 1853 Reverend Jordan Winston organized the Olive Chapel of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in Kirkwood. According to a centennial program included in the historical collection of Grace Episcopal Church in Kirkwood the African Methodist Episcopal Church is an offspring of the Wesley Methodist in the city of Philadelphia where Richard Allen, a black man, became its first bishop in 1816. The members of the Olive Chapel came not only from the city of Kirkwood but also from Meacham Park, Clayton, St. Louis and Oakland. In its early years the little church was served by a circuit rider. It was on the same circuit as the African Methodist Episcopal churches in Carondelet and Labadie. When the membership outgrew the small stone building on Washington Avenue property was purchased in 1923 at the corner of Monroe and Harrison Avenues for a new building.
